Rebels Push Near Madrid As Defenses Are Smashed

Pelayos Gorge Seized, Armies Are 19½ Miles From Capital.

'Zero Hour' in War Is Believed Near

By the Associated Press.

Brunette, Spain, Oct. 15.—Fascist insurgents tonight drove government defenders of Madrid back on this town which is only 19½ miles due west of the capital.

Government forces defending the Pelayos Gorge were routed, but fell back to a reasonably well fortified area between Chapineria and this windswept village below the Guadarrama Mountain range.

Barbed-wire defended trenches fell before the insurgent advance through Navas Del Rey, about 25 miles west by north of Madrid.

Reinforcements were trucked up to the government lines here as ambulances loaded with the wounded threaded their way back toward Madrid.

"Zero Hour" Is Near.

Burgos, Spain, Oct. 15 (AP).—Motorized columns of Generalissimo Francisco Franco's insurgent troops rumbled almost within shelling distance of Madrid tonight, pounding ahead in a tremendous new offensive against the capital.

Advance 13 Miles.

Steel-helmeted regulars, under Varela's command, drove forward 13 miles in a sweeping attack ranging between Santa Cruz Del Retamar and Chapineria, 9 miles east of San Martin De Valdeiglesias—about 50 kilometers from their objective.

Trucks, tanks and armored cars thundered over the roads in the fan-shaped offensive. Insurgent planes swung low over the advancing troops, raking the retreating government militiamen with deadly effect.

On the northern front, Gen. Emilio Mola's rebels pushed rapidly toward the capital, plodding doggedly ahead over the bleak mountain terrain.

A column advancing from Siguenza toward Guadalajara, 35 miles from Madrid, made heavy territorial gains, but suffered severe losses from the sniping and ambushes of government guerilla bands stubbornly failing back.

Fires Trap Miners.

Hendaye, Francho-Spanish Frontier, Oct. 15 (U.P.).—Asturian miners were reported trapped between two fires today as they fought in the corpse-strewn streets of Oviedo in a desperate attempt to wipe out a barricaded rebel garrison.

Just when revenge for the miners' defeat in the 1934 revolution seemed within reach, a rebel relief column of Moroccans and foreign legionnaires, sent across the Canteburian Mountains to save the insurgent garrison from slaughter, seized the heights of Monte Naranco, north of the city.

From this dominating mountain top the rescue column poured murderous shell-fire on the city below. At the same time the remnants of Gen. Miguel Aranda's force, holding out in the fortified Vega munition works on the opposite city of Oviedo, opened an artillery and machine-gun bombardment, spreading ruin and death throughout the streets.

Deaths were reported in the thousands, including many women and children among the 40,000 civilians trapped in the city during the 87-day siege.

Aranda, who seized the city at the outbreak of the revolution, refused to allow any of the population to flee, regarding them as protection against the siege of the fierce dynamite-throwing miners

Babies for Sale

Three Infant 'Markets' Operate Openly, Within District Law; One Provides Illegitimate Offspring 4 Months Old or Under for $250.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

What price babies?

Anyone asking this question can easily find the answer here in Washington, where at least three "baby marts," dealing in illegitimate children, function openly and entirely within the law.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

In one, the price of a baby 4 months old or under is $250, with an additional $50 for each month thereafter. In another, the fee is $100 up to 6 months and $25 for each additional month. In still another, bargains are made and sales are closed around $15 "for very small children" and "more for older ones—to defray cost of board."

Business is good. The demand for babies almost always exceeds the supply. Unmarried prospective mothers, harassed, sunk in remorse, and faced with an uncertain future, both for themselves and the baby yet unborn, generally welcome a chance to turn their child over to someone else as soon as possible.

In Washington, where the present 30-year-old adoption law leaves loopholes for many questionable practices, such opportunities are not hard to find. Through friends, acquaintances, or in some cases their physicians, prospective mothers of illegitimates learn of establishments in the District "where infants are given the best of care until they can be placed in a good home."

A meeting subsequently is arranged between the unmarried girl and an agent in charge of one of these homes. The girl hears about the adoptive parents who are found for illegitimates through this medium. The girl agrees to place her yet-unborn baby in the agent's care. She agrees, further, that the infant may be taken from her on the very first day of its life, and that she will never make further inquiries about it.

The baby is born. It is taken immediately to the home. It is examined by a physician, who passes on its health. It is well taken care of—fattened, in fact, for a waiting market. Prospective adoptive parents are informed of its arrival. Negotiations for its adoption follow speedily. The adoptive parents have the agent's guarantee that the baby comes of good stock. They have a physician's statement that the baby is physically up to par. Papers are signed. The adoption is completed, the money is paid, and the baby is taken away. The

Permits Denied U.S. Elevators In Safety Step

50 Lifts Being Operated in Defiance of Code, Oehmann Says.

In open defiance of District safety regulations, the Federal Government is operating more than 50 elevators, some of them in the new Triangle buildings, which would be put out of service immediately if they were in private buildings, Col. John Oehmann, District building inspector, said yesterday.

Safety was sacrificed for architectural beauty in the Triangle buildings, Col. Oehmann revealed, and as a result the "overtravel" safety margin in elevator shafts was reduced below the minimum allowed by District law.

"I am withholding certificates of operation from those elevators," Col. Oehmann said. "In addition, I shall refuse to renew certificates of other elevators in Government buildings which are operating under conditions not allowed by the District code."

Architectural Beauty.

It would have been necessary to erect elevator penthouses on the roofs of the Triangle buildings to allow the margin of safety demanded by the District in elevator shafts, it was revealed. Architects successfully contended that penthouses would mar the architectural beauty of the roofs so they were ruled out.

As a result the elevators engineers were forced to cut from two to five feet from the safety margin at the top and the bottom of the elevator shafts. The safety margin is called for in the District code to prevent runaway elevators from crashing into the roof or basement floor.

"I refuse to accept responsibility for what might happen as a result of the defiance of the District

3 More Nations To Join World Monetary Pact

Belgium, Netherlands and Swiss to Announce for Gold Agreement.

While announcement was being made yesterday that gold stocks of the United States had passed the $11,000,000,000 mark for the first time in history, decision of three additional powers to join the monetary accord between this country, Great Britain and France was reported here.

Belgium, The Netherlands and Switzerland soon will announce their adherence to the tri-partite gold transfer agreement, according to the apparently authentic reports, which officials at the State and Treasury departments would not deny. At the State Department, officials said such negotiations were matters for the Treasury, but Secretary Morgenthau, of that branch of the Government, said he could not discuss any negotiations.

The three new countries will be the first to join the agreement since the United States, Britain and France announced its completion September 25. Secretary Morgenthau has openly invited other nations to join with the three original sponsors of the accord, designed to prevent wide fluctuations in currencies and provide a new system of gold transfers to that end.

Belgium Still on Gold.

Belgium, it was pointed out, still technically is on a gold standard and apparently would have little difficulty in agreeing on future gold standards.

The increase in this country's gold holdings, giving it possession of approximately half the world's monetary gold, was told in the daily Treasury statement for October 13, the day the tri-partite agreement went into effect. The total of $11,001,612,764 marked an increase of

Mrs. Simpson Rushes Suit For Divorce

All London Newspapers Refrain From Giving Report of Action.

By the Associated Press.

London, Oct. 15.—Attorneys today prepared Mrs. Ernest (Wallie) Simpson's divorce suit for an early hearing, possibly before the end of the month.

The beautiful American friend of King Edward VIII is suing her ship broker husband on charges of misconduct, the only grounds for divorce in England. He announced he would not contest the action.

Her suit will be heard at Ipswich one of the provincial assize centers, on a date to be set Saturday.

To Hold Court Tomorrow.

Justice Hawke, who will preside, will arrive Saturday at Norwich to hold court there for a week before moving to Ipswich for the autumn assizes. On the first day of the Norwich session, "commission day," he will set down the cases scheduled for hearing and will assign dates.

The following Saturday—October 24—he will move to Ipswich to hold court there for three days.

It was understood only one other civil case was listed on the Ipswich docket besides Mrs. Simpson's, and both were expected to be heard October 27, the last day of the session.

Although Simpson himself announced the suit after he and his slender wife moved to separate residences last night, the British public in general presumably still was unaware that their monarch's closest woman friend was seeking to rid herself of her husband.

London Papers Silent.

Not one London newspaper published the story. Even the news reviews, most of which have printed pages of articles copiously illustrated with photographs showing the Baltimore debutante and King Edward together, put their weekly editions on the street without even a hint of the rift in the Simpson household.

Both Mrs. Simpson and her estranged husband continued their normal ways.

After disclosing that the suit had been filed, Simpson, New York-born and Harvard-educated British subject, went to his office in the shipping district as usual.

Science Reports Rat's Leg 'Detour' In New Operation

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—A new surgical operation which detours a living leg from one rat to another was announced today in Science, the journal of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

The operation is the first important advance in nearly 30 years in giving new legs to a higher animal. In 1907, Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute, grafted a new leg on a dog. But the leg was paralyzed.

In the new operation the leg is not paralyzed. It has living nerves, power of motion and of sensation. It is described by J. Y. Schwind, of Loyola University School of Medicine, Chicago.

Dr. Schwind used the "plastic surgery" methods by which living skin is moved from one part of the body to another to cover disfigurements. He thereby moved the right hind legs of several rats successfully to the backs of other rats.

U.S. Cramped, But Can't Add Space in City

By Robert C. Albright.

The old woman who lived in the shoe knew what to do about it, but Uncle Sam has more children and more troubles, too. Between them both, he's outgrowing his shoe. And the shoe is Washington.

He is leasing space in 124 private Washington buildings, including office structures, private residences, apartment houses and department stores. He is paying $2,694,792 a year rent for 2,823,094 square feet of office space. He is sending some workers to Baltimore. And still he is looking for space.

Even completion of the huge new Interior Department Building, covering a 5-acre tract, won't solve his problem, say Government "space control" experts. That space already is taken in advance, and the space to be vacated by units entering the new building is asked for, too.

Although Washington's host of 115,569 Federal employes has stopped growing for the time being, the space problem hasn't. Government agencies with branches scattered indiscriminately over the city are clamoring to be placed in one building. Uncle Sam can't find the building.

No Space Available.

In all of Washington it is doubtful that one suitable office building, with 100,000 or more square feet of space, is available for his needs, the experts said.

It was learned before the Social Security Board recently rented a Baltimore building for its old-age pension unit, it advertised for 300,000 square feet of office space in Washington. No bids were received.

For months, the Government has been trying to find quarters within a reasonable radius of the White House for some 200 men in "the President's own" headquarters company of the Army. They are housed in a temporary building at Eighteenth and C streets which Secretary Ickes wants to demolish. No substitute quarters have been found.

Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell's Resettlement Administration is now housed in 36 separate buildings in different parts of town. Dr. Tugwell would like to lodge most of them in one building, and has asked for such space. He can't get it. Neither can the Parks Progress Administration, which also is scattered all over the town.

The Rural Electrification Administration is in a similar plight. Learning that most of the old Hurley-Wright Building will be vacated when the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Office of Education move into the Interior Building nearing completion, REA asked for the space. Another divided Federal agency was ahead of them.

The reason completion of another new building won't cut Uncle Sam's rent bill, the experts say, is that workers in some Federal units are still badly huddled, and they will need the old space to expand in.

But there's another side to the picture. The Resettlement Administration is rapidly dropping workers, and there have been reports that most of its functions may be absorbed by the Agriculture Department. If it continues shrinking, Uncle Sam, landlord and tenant, may find a building for it.

Seek Square-Foot Price.

The Government recently purchased one building outright to provide more working space—the Potomac Park apartments. Three other apartment houses and a hotel—the Rochambeau, the Premier, the La Salle and the Arlington—are under lease. Former quarters of W. B. Moses & Co. and Barber & Ross, provide quarters for some Federal workers. Three spacious former residences are being used. And whole floors in innumerable office buildings have been taken over. In addition, of course, the Government is using the 103 buildings of its own.

The Government tries to elase space for $1 a square foot, but rent frequently ranges over and under this figure. Some Washington landlords have been known in an emergency to rent space to Uncle Sam at a loss.

Ten years ago the Government was paying $857,141 a year for 1,600,468 square feet of space. In December, 1932, three months before the Roosevelt Administration came in, it was leasing 1,090,925 square feet for $892,208.

Ten months after the New Deal was inaugurated, in November, 1933, rent dropped to $826,798, and space leased climbed slightly to 1,181,735 square feet.

Judge Apologizes For Mistaken Term

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 15 (AP).—Federal Judge John D. Martin apologized in the name of the United States to a colored man today who had been held in jail without cause for four months through an error of a court attache.

"You have been done a great injustice," Judge Martin told the colored man. He said he was "heartbroken" the man had been wrongfully held.

"But why did you plead guilty?" he asked Robert Broadie.

"Judge," Broadie replied, "I was tired of sitting in that jail. I wanted to get it over with and start serving my sentence and get out. I wasn't getting nowhere."

Roosevelt Says Issue Is Security of Masses; Landon Indicts Deceit

Foe Gives 'Lip Service' to Free Enterprise, Kansan Declares.

Home Rule, Courts In Peril, He Adds

En Route to Topeka, He Says New Deal Debt Endangers Farms.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard Landon special en route to Topeka, Oct. 15.—Gov. Alf M. Landon told Illinois farmers tonight President Roosevelt is "giving lip service to our system of free enterprise" while Administration spokesmen "are insidiously attacking the doctrine of home rule and of an independent judiciary."

"They would make of Congress merely a body to ratify the arbitrary actions of a one-man super Government," the Presidential nominee told Danville and Decatur audiences as he rolled homeward after a seven-stop campaign through Indiana.

The Governor apparently pointed his talks directly at Mr. Roosevelt's Chicago speech last night.

"If Mr. Roosevelt really is sincere in his desire to preserve and defend the Constitution of the United States," Landon asserted from his rear platform, "let him in no uncertain terms repudiate those who speak for his Administration. Let him also repudiate his "horse and buggy" interview in which he prophesied disaster if industry was permitted to remain free from coercive interferences and the farmer is once more made lord of his own farm."

Sees "Much at Stake."

The Kansan sped toward Topeka from a 2,400-mile bid for 88 Presidential electoral votes in the Lake States. He reiterated that the people "have much at stake in the approaching election."

"The kind of Government we are to have in the next four years," Landon said, "is of greater importance than many Administration leaders would have us believe. Is is to be a Government guaranteeing the rights of the individual or will it be one patterned after those that have taken away the last vestage of personal liberties? * * *"

"I say, let us look at the record. What recovery we have had has come since the Supreme Court gave the country a real breathing spell from the President's must legislation based on doctrines of regimented business, industry and agriculture. These policies have kept 20,000,000 on the relief rolls and 11,000,000 in the mire of unemployment. This, I remind you, is in the face of the squandering of many billions of our money."

Landon said New Deal spokesmen are advocating "the doctrine of scarcity, of regimentation of all phases of our life by an all-powerful Federal Government in Washington."

Charges "Lip Service."

"We have every reason to believe," the nominee contended, "until he (Mr. Roosevelt) assures us otherwise, that in his heart he longs for a planned economy. In 1932 he rendered lip service to the merit system but on election placed his head spoilsman in charge of the biggest grab bag in history. He is still rendering this lip service and the politicians are parcelling out the jobs.

"It is for these reasons that I insist the American people are entitled to a frank and non-evasive answer."

Repeatedly, during his campaign across Indiana and Illinois, Landon told farm audiences that "intolerable" New Deal debts represented a "first mortgage on every home and farm." He voiced opposition "to waste, extravagance and debt because I am opposed to the ultimate confiscation of farms and homes.

The Roosevelt Administration security program drew the Kansan's attention as he emphasized with raised right arm a contention that its pay roll taxes would build a "huge fund" which would constitute "a temptation to waste and extravagance."

"It is the farmers and the workers

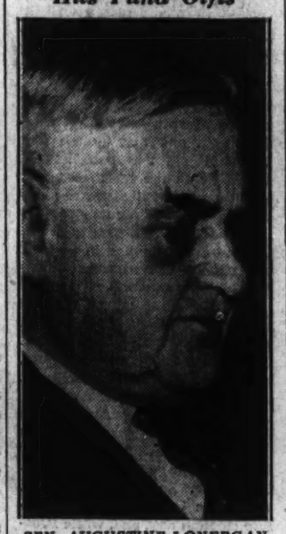
Hits Fund Gifts



SEN. AUGUSTINE LONERGAN, of Connecticut, who would bar all gifts to political war chests, proposes that Government pay the campaign costs.

Senator Urges Law to Forbid Campaign Gifts

By the Associated Press.

Abolition of private contributions to election campaign funds, with expenses of such contests being borne by the Government, was proposed yesterday by Chairman Lonergan (Democrat), Connecticut, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee.

Lonergan said adoption of this plan would give all citizens equal opportunity to run for public office and, at the same time, would minimize, if not remove, violations of election laws relating to finances.

Although similar proposals have been made informally in the past, Lonergan's suggestion drew particular attention coming from the chairman of the committee entrusted with investigation of the expense accounts of Presidential, Vice Presidential and Senatorial nominees, and charged with recommending legislation on the subject.

Large Sums of Money.

"In many instances," Lonergan said, "large sums of money are contributed to nominate and elect persons of wealth and those backed by wealth. If contributions from all sources were prohibited and the Government handled the problem, aspiring citizens, rich, moderately well off, and poor, would be on equal basis.

"Observers of political activities have seen instances where contests have had the appearance of an auction."

Lonergan's proposal climaxed a day in which he and members of his staff had waited fruitlessly for word from a Pennsylvanian subpenaed to appear before the committee today after refusing to furnish information to the committee.

Two Subpenas Served.

Two subpenas were served in Pennsylvania, Lonergan said, but J. Howard Pew, of Philadelphia, a member of the Republican national finance committee, "complied" with the committee's request and, officials said, would not be required to answer his subpena. Pew furnished a list of his expenditures and offered to give any other information the committee desired, a committee spokesman said.

Lonergan did not disclose the identity of the other person subpenaed but it was understood he was a Pittsburgher.

Lift Workers' Pay, He Warns Industry

Grand Rapids Crowds Break Ropes, Crush Imperils Children.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 15.—Asserting he is not afraid of the verdict, President Roosevelt tonight defined what he called the outstanding issue of the campaign: "Shall the social and economic security and betterment of the masses of the American people be maintained and strengthened, or not?"

Speaking from the east lawn of the city hall to thousands of persons jammed around a flag-ornamented platform, the President expressed a belief that the people of America on November 3 would ask for continuance of the "present type of government" in preference to one that "put dollars above human rights."

In the heart of the country's vast automotive industrial district, he asserted 1936 promises to be the second largest year of automobile production in history, but added that the industry, and every other industry still needs improvement in relationship with employes.

"It is my belief," he said, "that the manufacturers of automobiles and the manufacturers of many other necessary commodities must, by planning, do far more than they have done to date to increase the yearly earnings of those who work for them."

Referring early in his address to the problem of relief, he argued relief and work relief provided by Federal funds "saved American humanity, and saved also the solvency of cities and States in every part of the Nation."

Reverses Landon's Trail.

The Chief Executive came to Detroit after an all-day stumping trip of southern Michigan cities, which traced in reverse much of yesterday's political trail of Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas, his Republican opponent.

Before the talk, Mr. Roosevelt dined with several guests aboard his special train. One was the Most Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, Catholic bishop of Detroit and the superior of Father Charles E. Coughlin, bitter critic of the President and sponsor of Representative William Lemke's Union Party Presidential candidacy.

Bishop's Remark Recalled.

Bishop Gallagher, who has stoutly defended Father Coughlin's political activities but admonished him against personal attacks on President Roosevelt, told a press conference in New York last September 3, after returning from Rome:

"If I were to go to the polls as a private citizen, I should vote for President Roosevelt. He is the only candidate I know."

Later the official publication of the Detroit Catholic Diocese stated that Bishop Gallagher had indorsed no political candidate and would not do so.

Another dinner guest was Senator James Couzens, defeated for renomination in last month's Republican primary after he had indorsed the President. Others were Frank Murphy, Democratic nominee for Governor, who introduced the President on his appearances today; Representative Prentiss M. Brown, Democratic candidate for United States Senator; Harry L. Pierson, former Michigan WPA director, and Mrs. Pierson.

From his special train in the outskirts of the city, the President drove through streets banked with cheering crowds to suburban Hamtranck, where he dedicated the Keyworth Stadium. There he spoke again of wages, saying he was not only thinking of food and clothing as national needs and adding:

"I'm thinking of a future Amer-

Olson Chirps On Despite Scarcity of Birdseed And Horrors of Blood-Girdling District Trek

The following report by Sidney Olson, Post Staff District girdler, reveals that the young man is under a terrific strain, or something. But, more's the pity, he indomitably goes on, and on, and on.

By Sidney Olson,
A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Petunia, District Line, October 15—(By Small Boy).—Exhausted by the toughest trek yet on this nerve-wracking dash around the District, your correspondent was forced to stop here, near Easy Place southeast, between Forty-sixth street and Benning road, at a late hour tonight.

I had to stop, partly because it's getting dark, partly because it's rough going, and partly because my feet are killing me.

My garters keep slipping down, too. It's been a terrific grind.

I've named this spot Camp Petunia, because just a little ways back the District Line cuts right across a lady's petunia beds. Hewing to my course, I did, too, and I'll always remember that moment, as I waded through the lovely purple blossoms. I wish I could forget it, but what the lady called me is etched forever in my mind. I can still hear her screaming.

But we District-girdlers and globe-girdlers have to steel ourselves to that sort of thing. Applause, envy, physical violence, bear-traps, "No Trespassing" signs—all of these things are merely part of the day's work. We shrug, and pass on, except when we have to run like hell.

I'm running low on birdseed, however. This worries me, as all girdlers chew something to keep up their strength and their morale. I chose birdseed on the theory that the seeds would get in my teeth, and I would spend so much time trying to get them out that I wouldn't brood over the tough going. So far this has worked out fine except that birdseed taste terrible and so I have been sick to the stomach all the way.

Those who have followed the trek thus far will remember that the District Line went into a hole off Peabody street northeast yesterday and that I camped in the hole for the night. I made a lot of notes in the hole for reference today, and as I look them over I am forcibly struck with their one characteristic—they are all illegible.

Only one cryptic notation can be deciphered. This is a note saying simply: "One dozen eggs." This may mean something very significant, but it's slipped me right now.

Anyway, I was awakened this morning in the hole by Bill Klemm, one of The Post photographers, sent out from the office to penetrate the grim jungle off New Hampshire avenue northeast and bring back assurances

Caged Bear Kills Its Owner And Helper Trying to Aid Him

Ellsworth, Me., Oct. 15 (AP).—A captive 350-pound bear mangled and killed two men at the Whistle Inn, near here today.

The animal went berserk as George Langley, proprietor of the inn, entered a cage to give it its breakfast. The other man killed, James Burchell, 68, of Fort Fairfield. Langley's helper at the inn, was attacked as he went to his employer's rescue.

There were no witnesses to the killings. Mrs. Langley had gone to Bangor for the day.

Passing on a truck, George A. Merrill, of Bangor, a telephone company employe, noticed the bear lying over the body of one of the men, and Joseph Willette, a neighbor, shot the animal with a rifle.

Police believed the enraged killer bear pushed the 60-year-old Langley through the pen door as he entered with food. As the animal attacked Langley, his assistant apparently struck the bear with a shovel and he in turn met death. The bodies of both men were torn and their limbs broken.

Mr. and Mrs. Langley had operated the inn in the north Ellsworth district for the past 10 years and kept the bears as a trade attraction. Both animals were believed to have been tame and, as far as police could ascertain, never before had caused trouble.

Tugwell Fires Democratic Aid As a Politician

The dismissed employe, Col. Stanley W. Moulding, had been charged in Cincinnati with virtual coercion of Federal workers in organizing "the Hilltop Democratic Club" from a nucleus of employes on the project.

Warning Is Issued.

Following receipt of the investigator's report yesterday, Frank Schmitt, chief of the construction division of the Ra, fired Moulding and at the same time issued the warning:

"Political activities on Federal projects on the part of RA employes are not and will not be tolerated.

It was learned that the investigator's report largely discounted the "coercion" charges, but found Moulding guilty of political activity among the workers. Charles H. Elston, Cincinnati Republican leader, had claimed Moulding aided in organizing the club, solicited funds for membership in it, promised better jobs to those who attended, and "spied" on workers attending a Knox rally. Moulding denied the charges.

G. O. P. Repeats Cry of Waste.

The committee charged that in four counties adjacent to Philadelphia more than $8,500,000 was spent for roads and only 136 miles were improved, at a cost of $62,881 per mile, compared with a cost of $40,000 a mile estimated by the State highway department for a concrete road.

One item in the cost of the roads, the committee said, was $572,180 for transporting workers to and from the projects, although workers were supposed to be drawn from adjacent territory.

Other Charges Made.

In Chester, Pa., the committee charged, trucks which had been hired at $1.45 an hour with drivers by the city engineer, the WPA paid $2.25 an hour without drivers. The city was said to have rented steamrollers at $2.50 an hour while the WPA paid $5.

Meanwhile, Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, announced that tomorrow night he would answer charges of Gov. Alf M. Landon that relief "has become a national scandal."

"Gov. Landon asked for it and he will get it," Hopkins said. "You may be sure I'm not going to pull my punches. We have never covered up our record, for we are proud of it, and we don't intend to have it smeared for partisan purposes."

Extravagance Is Denied.

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 15 (AP).—Frederick Mapes, Procurement division chief of the Federal Treasury, today denied "extravagance in the WPA at Chester" as charged by the Republican National Committee.

Mapes said the $2.25 an hour rate which the committee claimed was paid by WPA for trucks without drivers, "must be incorrect because the highest rate we pay is $2 an hour for the largest type trucks."

"Heavy equipment such as that is rented on an open bid basis," Mapes said.

Janitor's Broom Mars Tranquillity Of Press Room

The traditional tranquillity of the police headquarters press room was disrupted yesterday—the janitor swept the floor.

Forced from the room by the clouds of dust and rattle of empty bottles kicked across the room by the vicious sweeps of a mop, reporters stormed into the office of Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson.

"What is this, a New Deal for the press?" they demanded.

"No, boys," Inspector Thompson explained, "Maj. Brown will be coming in for inspection and we want to make the old place look presentable."

The Detective Bureau was saved for last in the annual inspection of the department. Everything was found in fine shape except for some of the antiquated buildings, the major said.

Liner Rescues 54 From Sinking Ship

Manila (Friday), Oct. 16 (U.P.).—The steamship Concordia radioed the Radio Corporation of America here today that the freighter Koko Maru sank 10 miles off Peidra Point in the northern Luzon area with a cargo of iron ore. The Concordia saved the crew of 54 and reported she was proceeding to Keelung with the survivors.

By Franklyn Waltman

THE one fly in the Democratic cup of joy and cheer at this time is the Literary Digest poll, which indicates Gov. Alf M. Landon as the victor in the Presidential contest. Even though they publicly scoff at the Digest figures, many Democratic leaders feel uneasy over them. The thought that constantly haunts them is that the Digest polls have never failed to indicate the trend.

WALTMAN.

For a time the Democrats believed—and hoped—that as the Digest poll progressed it would show a sharp swing to President Roosevelt, and that by the time the final poll was published he would be in the lead. That may happen yet, but it seems unlikely on the basis of figures already published. Gov. Landon in recent weeks has lost ground in the poll, but not in the measure anticipated by the Democrats.

The Digest report, for the first time in this campaign, this week gives results from all 48 States. Its figures, taken on their face, would give Gov. Landon 32 States, some, however, by a close margin. The poll as it now stands gives Gov. Landon 55.4 per cent of the popular vote cast. Thus the trend shown by the poll is strongly toward Gov. Landon. The Digest will make two more reports before election day, and, while President Roosevelt may narrow the margin between him and Gov. Landon, it is doubtful whether he can overcome his opponent's lead, based on 1,811,489 ballots, or, roughly, one out of every 20 voters.

This Digest result is directly contrary to the report of Dr. George Gallup's American Institute of Public Opinion poll, which shows the President holding a substantial lead, on the basis of the last published returns. This is the poll by which the Democrats now swear, even though a year ago Democratic Publicity Director Charles Michelson impugned the impartiality of the Gallup poll and stated his preference for the Digest poll as the most reliable barometer of public sentiment. Is Mr. Michelson's face now red?

There seems to be no way to reconcile the Digest poll and the Gallup findings. If their final tabulations show results as divergent as they do today, both cannot be right. The managers of the Gallup poll have argued that the Digest poll is not a good sample or cross-section of sentiment because it makes no particular effort to probe relief workers and others in the lower economic levels in proportion to their numbers to the total population.

The Digest has retorted that its method of relying on numerical volume to obtain a correct cross-section in the past always has shown a correct trend of sentiment. It is true that sentiment in the large cities is just being reflected in the Digest poll, and as the returns from these centers of population increase in the next two weeks it may make a difference in the outcome.

Some statisticians hold the real value of the Digest poll is that it shows the shifts in sentiment since the 1932 election. Thus the current poll indicates that Gov. Landon will receive the votes of 85 per cent of those who voted for Herbert Hoover in 1932, but that President Roosevelt will receive the votes of but 89.6 per cent of those who voted for him last year. On the other hand, Mr. Landon will receive the votes of 25 per cent of those who voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, and the President will receive support this year from 13 per cent of those against him four years ago.

In other words, if the Digest figures correctly indicate the trend of public sentiment, one-fourth of those who supported Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 are now against him, while 13 per cent of those who opposed him four years ago are now supporting him. On the basis of the vote cast in 1932, these shifts indicate Gov. Landon—the winner by 1,273,000 votes—a narrow margin, which gives no consideration to new voters numbering 3,000,000 or 4,000,000.

But if the Digest figures are taken on their face value and projected to cover the vote cast in 1932, Gov. Landon would be the winner by a popular plurality of 5,800,000. Thus, the conclusion you draw from the Digest figures depends on the use you make of them. This is well illustrated in the case of California.

The Digest records the California result to date as follows: Landon, 83,508; Roosevelt, 72,352, and Lemke, 4,698. Thus, it is indicated that Mr. Landon will poll about 52 per cent of the vote cast and will carry California. Now many observers are convinced that California is safely in the Roosevelt column—and so the Digest poll shows on the basis of shifts in sentiment.

The returns from California include 76,663 persons who in 1932 voted for Herbert Hoover and 67,739 who in that year voted for Mr. Roosevelt. Of those who voted for Mr. Hoover, 79 per cent assert they will vote this year for Landon and 18 per cent for Mr. Roosevelt. Of those who voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, 74 per cent assert they will vote for him again this year and 22 per cent gave Gov. Landon as their preference.

Using the vote cast in California in 1932 as a basis, these shifts in sentiment are not sufficient to take the State away from Mr. Roosevelt. On this basis he would carry California by 258,000, compared with his plurality of 476,255 of four years ago.

In an effort to find some solace in the Digest figures giving New York to Gov. Landon, some Democrats have seized on the fact that 67 per cent of the first ballots returned from New York City were marked for President Roosevelt. They argue this means President Roosevelt will carry the State. But 74 per cent of the New York ballots from outside of New York City are for Gov. Landon, and the important factor is that the bulk of the New York vote comes from outside of the city. Thus in 1932 there were cast 2,039,232 votes in the city and 2,433,690 votes in the remainder of the State.

A great shift of sentiment against the President has taken place in New York, according to the Digest figure, than in the Nation generally. Of those who voted for Mr. Roosevelt in 1932, 29 per cent, it is indicated, are now against him, while Gov. Landon is the preference of 87 per cent of those who voted for Mr. Hoover. On the basis of these shifts applied to the 1932 vote cast, Gov. Landon would carry New York State by better than 600,000 plurality.

Thus you can figure all day long—and the Digest figures continue to favor Gov. Landon much to the chagrin of the Democrats. But of course if the sample is an imperfect one, it does not make much difference how you figure it. It means nothing. But the Democrats cannot be sure the sample is a wrong one.

that eventually will pay Santa Claus in the present Administration program," Landon told throngs as he sped toward Topeka.

Saying that the "New Deal program of reckless extravagance has hurt the farmer more than anyone else," the Governor touched on education.

"It is a sad commentary that today this fact must be emphasized," he said. "'Education must be free. Partisan politics have no part in those agencies which directly touch the lives of all rural people.

"I know of no one who wants to save a dollar at the expense of the truly unemployed, but we do want relief administered without waste, without extravagance and, above all, without partisanship."

Passes Roosevelt Train.

The nominee left Grand Rapids at 9 o'clock after a night at the home of Senator Arthur Vandenberg, passing President Roosevelt's inbound special train in the yards. His last Michigan stop was at Sturgis, where he thanked a crowd, estimated at 8,000, for the "courteous and friendly reception" extended by the State. It was the Kansan's first personal campaign for Michigan's 19 electoral votes. On this fourth swing since his nomination, Landon made his second bid for Ohio's 26 ballots and Indiana's 14, and crossed Illinois, with 29 electoral votes, for the fourth and fifth times.

Some Republican aids talked of a dash to Oklahoma City the first of next week before a final Eastern tour, but advisers said no decision had been made.

Quoting from his Detroit speech Tuesday night, the Governor often told his back-platform listeners that "when anyone attempts to change our form of government without the consent of the people, we are Americans before we are Republicans or Democrats, or anything else."

An issue of the campaign, he said at many points, is "the kind of government we will leave to our children."

The crowd hearing Landon at Kendallville, first Indiana stop, was estimated by police at 3,000. The Huntington audience was put at 8,000 and that at Wabash at 7,000. Between stops, the candidate conferred with State and local party leaders.

Meanwhile, William L. Hutcheson, director of the Republican National Committee's labor division, issued a statement in which he said "the New Deal is using its influence to control the internal affairs of labor unions."

"This was illustrated," Hutcheson said, "when notice went forth to compel union men of Chicago to march in the parade held in that city last night for President Roosevelt. It is a recognized right of unions to direct their members to participate in a labor parade, but it is an unheard of thing to compel them to march in a political parade.

Likened to Dictatorship.

"The tactics used in promoting last night's parade in Chicago are similar to those used in countries under dictatorship. Workingmen are free to vote as they please and should be free to march in parades of their own choosing. No New Deal threats should deter them from exercising their rights as American citizens."

At Peru, Ind., 13 elephants, bearing the letters "Welcome Landon" and one carrying pictures of Landon and Col. Frank Knox, were paraded by the rear platform.

"They say an elephant never forgets," the Governor said. "Well, I'm never going to forget this friendly reception."

Benjamin Wallace Douglas, farmer and writer of Brown County, Ind., conferred with Landon as he traveled across the State. He said the people "were very favorably impressed" with the Kansan's views on social security and were "confident that under his administration there will be "no unfairness, no snooping and no hardship on the worker."

The Campaign Arena

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Oct. 15.—Campaigning for Representative William Lemke for President on the Union Party ticket, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, of Louisiana, today said that in States where Lemke is not on the November election ballot, Gov. Alfred Landon, Republican nominee, is his second choice.

"My third choice," he said, "is Norman W. Thomas, the Socialist candidate, fourth, Earl Browder, the Communist candidate, and fifth, President Roosevelt.

"We have had more communism and socialism under Roosevelt than we would have under Thomas."

Hutchinson, Kans., Oct. 15.—The Kansas conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church today adopted a resolution advocating the election of Gov. Alf M. Landon as President.

The action followed an address by Bishop Noah W. Williams, St. Louis, who said the "attitude of the Democratic Party was reflected" when a delegate walked out of the national party convention at Philadelphia "because a Negro minister prayed."

* * * *

Enid, Okla., Oct. 15 (AP).—Harry Woodring, Secretary of War, told a Democratic rally last night it was "nothing" to balance the budget in Kansas, home of the Republican Presidential nominee.

"Now the Governor is carrying a balanced budget in one hand and offering relief with the other. But he couldn't have balanced his budget had not the Federal Government given him $58,000,000."

* * * *

Secretary Ickes said yesterday he would make what he called another "documented" attack on Gov. Landon's record as a public official next Tuesday night in a radio speech from here.

"I will read photostatic copies on certain phases of Gov. Landon's record," Ickes said. "After the speech I suspect certain members of the Liberty League will be sorry they contributed so much to his campaign fund."

Ickes will speak in Philadelphia Monday night, he said, on "that old but always refreshing subject, the Liberty League."

He will speak at Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill., Wednesday night on matters "more or less local" to the Chicago metropolitan area. Speech at Omaha Friday night, Ickes said, would be a discussion of comparative accomplishments in Nebraska and Kansas regarding social and progressive legislation.

* * * *

The American Commonwealth Federation, which seeks a "permanent alignment of all the Farmer-Labor and progressive forces," yesterday urged re-election of President Roosevelt.

Terming him "by far the more progressive" of the major party candidates, the federation added that support of the President was suggested since there had not been opportunity to develop a "nationally organized party" with a Presidential candidate to promote its own program.

* * * *

Boston, Oct. 15 (AP).—John F. Gatelee, president of the Massachusetts Federation of Labor, in an open letter to the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, today termed the radio priest a "more fervent Communist than even Earl Browder himself."

Gatelee suggested to Father Coughlin a "deep total and utter silence" as penance.

Gatelee's charge was based on the priest's recent speeches. "I base that assertion," he wrote, "on your alleged statement that you are in favor of bullets if ballots didn't prevail. No dyed-in-the-wool Communist would fail to agree with those sentiments."

3 More Nations To Join World Monetary Pact

Belgium, Netherlands and Swiss to Announce for Gold Agreement.

$15,971,354 over the previous statement.

It was made plain, however, that the increase had no relation to the accord, Secretary Morgenthau pointing out that the additional gold had been on its way to this country before the transfer agreement was reached. The additional gold arrival apparently consisted largely of bullion received by the Guaranty Trust Co., which on October 13 announced receipt of $10,000,000 in gold from Holland, $2,000,000 from England and $127,000 from India.

U. S. Holdings Tripled.

Through devaluation of the dollar and a continual flow of gold to this country, United States holdings of the precious metal have been almost tripled over a period of two and a half years. At the close of business on January 31, 1934, gold holdings were valued at $4,034,867,780 in the old dollars. On the following day their value was listed as $7,018,263,925 in the new dollars. Almost four billion dollars worth of the bullion has been added to the store since that time.

The government's gold is virtually all in bars, about the size of an ordinary building brick. Each bar weighs 400 ounces and is worth $14,000. Most of the metal store is held in repositories at New York, Denver and Philadelphia. However, the Government plans to start moving much fo it next month to a new inland stronghold at Fort Knox, Ky., where it will be protected by machine gun "pill boxes" and the latest protective devices inside a vault of granite, steel and concrete.

Discussing the gold transfer agreement, Secretary Morgenthau yesterday denied the understanding included any commitments on the United States silver buying policy.

Mrs. Henry Coe, Society Leader, Dies at Home

Wife of Gynecologist Was in Ill Health Since Fall in 1933.

She had been in ill health since she was injured in a fall in 1933. At her bedside at the time of her death were her husband, famous gynecologist, a son and two grandchildren. Only recently the Coes celebrated their fifty-fourth wedding anniversary.

Born in Pittsfield, Mass., Mrs. Coe was a graduate of Vassar College. She was married to Dr. Coe after his graduation from Harvard Medical School in 1882, and accompanied him to Europe, where he won degrees from Oxford, Edinborough, Leipsic and Vienna medical schools.

For more than 40 years she resided in New York, where she became identified with many musical organizations as a sponsor and a patroness. In her residence at 8 West Seventy-sixth street, she entertained many of the notables of her day. She knew the late King Edward VII when he visited the United States as Prince of Wales.

Mrs. Coe's varied interests included clubs and societies for women, which were just becoming prominent at the turn of the century and in the decade that followed. She founded the Colony Club of New York, and was the first president general of the National Society of New England Women.

She was a recognized leader and lecturer in the field of parliamentary law, and for several years she was parliamentarian of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Surviving Mrs. Coe are her husband, two sons, Fordyce B. and Arthur Paul Coe, and three grandchildren. She also leaves a brother, John Werden, of Mobile, Ala.

Funeral services will be held at the Church of the Epiphany at a time to be announced later. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Family 'Deported' By South Dakota Embroils 2 States

Omaha, Nebr., Oct. 15 (AP).—Lyman Lee and his family of five—"deported" from South Dakota because officials deemed them "likely to become public charges"—found themselves in the midst of a controversy tonight.

U. S. District Attorney Joseph T. Votava, of Omaha, called upon Dr. James M. Talcott and Georga A. Pettigrew—Federal probation officers here and at Sioux Falls, S. Dak., respectively—to make reports on the case.

Chairman Ernest Jacobberger of the Douglas County (Omaha) Board of Commissioners termed the family's treatment "a shame to humanity and a disgrace to the State of South Dakota." He added:

"Iowa, both Dakotas, Wyoming and Kansas have been dumping people here for the last six years."

Lee, 61, and his family—his wife, Mary, 28, and four children, Kit, 12; Dolly, 10; Lorraine, 3, and Loretta, 17 months—were brought here Tuesday night by Sheriff Frank Nash, of Charles Mix County, S. Dak. Nash told Deputy Sheriff William Nollman, of Omaha, the action was based on the fact the Lees were "likely to become public charges" and that Omaha was their last legal residence.

Ekins Due Tonight At Midway Isle Base

Pan American Airways Station, Wake Island (Friday), Oct. 16 (U.P.).—H. R. Ekins, of the New York World-Telegram and other Scripps-Howard newspapers, far ahead of two other New York newspaper writers in a race around the world in ordinary commercial aircraft flying over regular air lines, took off from this coral island at 5:43 a. m. today (1:43 p. m. Thursday, E. S. T.) for Midway—1,194 miles away.

He was due at Pan American Airways station there this evening and tomorrow will hop to Honolulu, and thence to San Francisco, where he is due before noon (P. S. T.) Sunday. He should be back in New York at 9 a. m. (E. S. T.) Monday, completing a dash around the world in approximately 19 days.

Far behind, Ekins' rivals—Dorothy Kilgallen, of the New York Journal-International News Service, and Leo Kieran, of the New York Times-N. A. N. A. Service—still were in Manila awaiting the transpacific flying boat China Clipper, which is due to take off on a return voyage to San Francisco from the Philippines' capital Sunday or Monday.

The China Clipper has been held up at Guam because of bad weather.

Sailors' Union Balks at Move For Strike Vote

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Oct. 15.—Sailors' Union officials announced tonight their locals were rejecting a proposal for a strike vote as proposed by the joint representatives of waterfront unions in the current shipping labor crisis and that the organization would give the Federal Maritime Commission "absolute and unrestricted co-operation."

E. F. Burke, secretary of the Cooks and Stewards Union, and Roy Farrell, representative of the maritime firemen, said their unions were contemplating a course similar to the Sailors' Union.

The three unions have a combined membership of about 18,000, almost half of the 38,000 maritime workers represented by a joint committee which yesterday asked for a strike referendum in the face of a Maritime Commission demand for an indefinite truce between workers and employers.

Harry Lundeberg, Sailors Union secretary, and Aaron Sapiro, the union's legal counsel, made the announcement. They insisted, however, their decision to co-operate fully with the Maritime Commission did not mean they were breaking away from the "solid front" of maritime workers.

Both employers and unions indicated they would stand by their new truce commitments after midnight, when a 15-day extension of old working agreements expires.

At the call of the Maritime Commission the employers agreed to an indefinite truce, but the unions consented only to another extension of old working agreements to October 28.

The commission reiterated today its disapproval of the union offer. Chairman H. A. Wiley told reporters he was "not excited" over the union threat to strike October 28 unless peace agreements are made nor the union challenge of the commission's authority.

"We are going to see this thing through and I think we are going to get peace," Wiley said.

Link to Ancestors of Mayas Found Along Honduran River

Along the Ulua River, in Honduras, a joint Smithsonian Institution-Peabody archeological expedition has discovered the remains of a culture which may have been directly ancestral to the great Mayan civilization of Yucatan.

Termed "one of the most significant discoveries in Central American archeology" the expedition, headed by Dr. William Duncan Strong, of the Bureau of American Ethnology, explored the so-called "Beaches of the Dead," where the mighty Ulua River for centuries has been cutting a deeper and deeper channel.

The expedition was, in a sense, a continuation of the work of Mrs. Dorothy M. Popenoe, wife of a United Fruit Co. official, who, coming on the spot in 1929, had herself lowered with ropes over the steep bank to recover skeletal material.

The expedition attaches great significance to the Ulua find since the region is just on the edge of the area of Maya civilization. This culture, outstanding for its magnificent temples and statuary, was the highest reached in the aborignal Americas, and one of the highest in the history of the world. Disintegrating when the Spanish explorers found it in the fifteenth century, it was quickly crushed under the heel of the conqueror.

Aware that such a surge of human intellect and energy could not have arisen from the ashes, Dr. Strong and his associates, Alfred Kidder 2d, and Drexel Paul, jr., of the Peabody Museum went there, determined to uncover its past.

Their start was discouraging. Arriving in Honduras, they found heavy rains had wiped out signs of the ancient graveyards explored by Mrs. Popenoe. However, they sank a trench 20 feet deep near the Ulua River and unearthed a considerable accumulation of cultural remains of the people who once roamed near the "Beaches of the Dead."

Some pottery they found was decorated with designs and showed a distinct resemblance to the Maya counterpart. It was all either incised or painted with only one color, but it did not show the elaborate polychrome decoration which may be found on Maya potsherds.

Old houses and refuse heaps also were unearthed at the bottom of the 20-foot trench. Above these remains was a layer of sterile clay, and above that a typically Mayan deposit of potsherds and burials.

Since the layer of clay between the two distinct deposits must have taken centuries to form, Dr. Strong and his party then sought elsewhere for the clew. At another site, along the Comayagua River, one of the tributaries of the Ulua, they found remains of an apparent transition stage, where the "Beaches of Dead" type of pottery blends with the Maya culture.

Coughlin, Ryan Urged to Enter Silent Order

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Oct. 15.—The Catholic Review, describing itself as the official organ of the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, will condemn the political activity of both the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin and Dr. John A. Ryan in an editorial to be published tomorrow.

"If both the reverend gentlemen would retire for some time to the Carthusian Order, where perpetual silence is observed, they would do a great favor to the church and to the country at large," the editorial will say.

Dr. Ryan is a member of the faculty of the Catholic University in Washington, and Archbishop Curley is chancellor of that school. Dr. Ryan defended President Roosevelt in a radio broadcast last week. Father Coughlin is head of the National Union for Social Justice.

"There are 30,000 Catholic priests in the United States," the editorial begins. "Of that number 29,998 are attending to their business, which is that of their heavenly Father.

"We have two politicians just now out of the 30,000; one is the leader in the business, the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit; the other jumped into the political swim over the radio a few nights ago. He is the Right Rev. Dr. John A. Ryan.

"The two gentlemen who have come into the arena of politics—one hotly for, and the other hotly against, the representative of the New Deal party—are rendering no service either to God or country. * * * To consider either one as a spokesman for the church would simply be a joke. * * * We must advise that both, as already stated, retire into solitude and rest a while."

Mrs. Julia Collins Dies at Her Home

Mrs. Julia E. Collins, 81, of 3117 Thirteenth street northwest, died yesterday at her home after a brief illness.

A native of Petersburg, Va., she was the widow of Thomas V. Collins. She came to Washington 34 years ago, and was active in church work. A graduate of Notre Dame Academy of Baltimore, she was a member of the Catholic Alumnae and the Ladies of Charity of the Shrine of the Sacred Heart.

Surviving Mrs. Collins are four daughters, Mrs. George Melling, Miss Jennie Collins and Miss Rosebud Collins, of Washington, and Miss Virginia W. Collins, of Tokyo, Japan, and two sons, the Rev. Henry D. Collins, pastor of St. John's Church, Long Green Valley, Md., and Dr. James C. Collins, of Fairmont, W. Va.

Stock Markets Ordered to File Annual Reports

SEC Calls on All National Exchanges to Give Facts About Finances.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday ordered all national exchanges to file annual financial statements for themselves and their affiliates and at the same time disclosed reports already filed by a dozen markets.

The commission said that ten registered exchanges and two others exempted from registration had voluntarily filed financial statements, containing virtually all the information demanded in yesterday's order.

These were the Chicago Stock Exchange, Chicago Curb Erchange Association, Baltimore Stock Exchange, Cleveland Stock Exchange, Cincinnati Stock Exchange, Los Angeles Stock Exchange, New Orleans Stock Exchange, Pittsburgh Stock Exchange, Salt Lake Stock Exchange, San Francisco Curb Exchange, Minneapolis-St. Paul Stock Exchange and Seattle Stock Exchange. The last two are exempt.

The Chicago Stock Exchange reported total assets of $2,303,078 for the year ended April 10, 1936. It had investments of $1,735,595 and an income of $216,382, expenses of $263,163, netting a loss of $46,781 for the year's operation.

The Chicago Curb Exchange Association on June 30, 1936, reported total assets of $105,146. For the quarter ended June 30 it reported a net loss of $2,949. The number of shares traded in the three-month period was 239,943 with a total value of $796,890, compared with 123,297 shares, valued at $229,323, in the same quarter of 1935.

The Los Angeles Stock Exchange on December 31, 1935, had total assets of $943,570, of which investments were $821,775. It submitted no income statement.

Landon Loses Vote When Mrs. O'Leary Fails to Pay Tax

Gov. Alf Landon lost a vote in nearby Virginia yesterday—that of Mrs. Lucy O'Leary, 79-year-old "rugged individualist" of Rosslyn. Mrs. O'Leary announced two weeks ago that she would vote for the Kansan. Yesterday, however, it developed that she had failed to pay a poll tax and therefore would be denied a ballot.

"I think it is a shame," Mrs. O'Leary lamented. "Think of it! Here I decided for the first time in my life to vote, and now this has to happen. I tell you, it hurts."

Mrs. O'Leary, a picturesque figure with dark curls, is amazingly healthy and active for one on the edge of 80. She lives alone in a small house. Rising with the sun, she chops wood for her fire, gathers the eggs and cares for Warrington, her 28-year-old horse.

Sometimes she rides Warrington and at other times she hitches him to an old-fashioned buggy. Lately this buggy had been arrayed with "Vote for Landon" signs.

Two weeks ago Mrs. O'Leary, who was born on the Arlington estate when it was owned by Robert E. Lee, appeared before Mrs. F. P. Scott, registrar for the Rosslyn Precinct, and signified her intention of voting November 3.

In checking up, Mrs. Scott found that Mrs. O'Leary had failed to pay the $1.50 poll tax. The dead-line for paying it was May 5.

King's Interest In Mrs. Simpson Arouses British

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

London, Oct. 15.—"Who's this Mrs. Simpson?"

This question has been heard with increasing frequency throughout Britain for months.

The name of the former Baltimore girl, unknown to the average Englishman a year ago, now is on every tongue—in pubs, workers' clubs, at taxicab stands, in factories—in fact everywhere the people of England gather to gossip.

Originated in Fleet Street.

The first inkling the British public generally received that an American woman was an intimate friend of King Edward VIII originated in Fleet street—the newspaper district of London. Newspaper reporters and other editorial representatives of British newspapers told their families of this friendship between their reigning monarch and a vivacious American married woman.

Such news was first class material for gossip. Within a few weeks it had been circulated among thousands. Later it became a household word throughout the country.

The general feeling then was that King Edward was a true grandson of his grandfather, King Edward VII, known and beloved for his democratic outlook on life. The consensus was that Edward VIII, as an unmarried monarch, was fully entitled to choose whatever companions he thought fit.

In fact, it was no surprise to the public at large that as King he continued his companionship with charming women, similar to the days when he was Prince of Wales.

Resentment Expressed.

It was only when the King broke all precedent by including Mrs. Simpson's name in the court circular that the first mutterings of discontent were heard by the man in the street. Resentment was expressed openly that a "foreigner" could so influence the King's actions.

British women regretted that the King apparently had turned down many eligible European princesses and scores of "blue-blooded" British girls in favor of "that American woman."

When news leaked out of the King's holiday tour with Mrs. Simpson along the Mediterranean coast, criticisms of King Edward's mode of living since ascending the throne became more vociferous.

Point to Parents' Lives.

People pointed out the model lives of the late King George and the present Queen Mary as an example King Edward should emulate. No one wished to deny the ruler relaxation from his duties, but it was felt that his well-known independence of other people's feelings in connection with his "play" hours was being stretched "beyond limits."

Mrs. Simpson undoubtedly was a splendid character, witty and appealing, but hardly so necessary to the King's welfare that he must be with her on every possible occasion, was the way they felt.

The King's disregard for the puritanism of exclusive British royal circles undoubtedly has weakened his popularity among the masses. He still is a favorite, but not quite as much as when he was the almost carefree Prince of Wales—when he marched with the British "tommies" to the trenches in France; when he visited the miners in their hovels; when he was the champion of the unemployed and Britain's traveling ambassador.

Cuba Seizes Copies Of Two Magazines

Havana, Oct. 15 (AP).—Police today seized 225 copies of the magazine Esquire and 150 of Literary Digest from the offices of the distributors here.

Marcial Perez, under bail and awaiting trial on charges of distributing obscene matter in connection with an article in the October Esquire, called "Latins Are Lousy Lovers," was cited to appear in court tomorrow on new charges of having subversive and injurious printed matter in his possession.

The November Esquire seized contained an editorial headed "The Latin Lack of a Sense of Humor," commenting on seizure of the October issue and arrest of Perez "and eight retailers."

The October 17 Literary Digest contained an article, "Clash in Cuba: President Gomez Offends the Army; Col. Batista Retaliates as Usual."

Col. Jose A. Pedraza, chief of the national police, declared it was because of these articles that the magazines were seized.

Culver Military Academy Student Took 'Five Pennies' and Ran Them Into Important Money in Short Time; Predicts Early End of Swing Tunes.

Swing time to Nichols is the bunk. "It's nothing but hot rhythm," he said. "It's as old as modern dancing. It's been played for years. They've just got a new name for the same old stuff."

Red Nichols is an authority. He should be for he took corn husks off ragtime the year he left Culver Military in 1920, at the start of the jazz age, and by so doing catapulted himself and his band of "Five Pennies" into top musical billing.

The notes of his trumpet, the blues of Miff Mole's trombone, the rattlings of Vic Burton's drum, the plunks of Eddie Lange's guitar, the vagaries of Artie Schutt's piano and the squealings of Jimmy Dorsey's clarinet put that little band of country lads among the "tops" as portrayers of popular music.

A year after Red, who still is as young and dapper as a Princeton sophomore, started his band, he was leading an outfit which was recording for 14 phonograph companies at the same time, raking in royalties in telephone numbers and playing in Broadway reviews.

Nichols, the 17-year-old schoolboy leader, was the son of a music teacher at the University of Utah who despises dance music and won't even discuss it with his son. "I had to run away from home to play the way I wanted to play—and that's no press story," declared the redtopped concertmeister.

"We drifted together and played the sticks for about a year. Then we made our first recording for Pathe under the name of the 'Redheads.' It was terrific. We got all kinds of offers.

"Next we made some records for Brunswick under the name of 'The Five Pennies,' but when we found we could record under different names for all the companies we went to town, playing night and day for every company in New York.

"Our band was hot because every man ad libbed all he wanted. It's all different today. Every lick you hear played today is written on a score. Then everything was left to the individual, all spontaneous, never twice alike."

Numerous learned studies of the American phenomenon of jazz were made, especially by foreigners. One work, by a Belgian, is called 'Le Jazz Hot,' a very serious study of the tootings of the Five Pennies. The author went so far as to copy down the notes as the boys played them, and then analyzed them to see what made them hot. He never found out. Le Jazz Americaine does not submit readily to scientific theorizings, especially since they never did it twice alike.

Red, now happily married and boasting of Dorothy, an 8-year-old daughter, bewails the advent of the swing vogue, "It'll pass," he said. "And the Lord knows I'll be happy to get up there and blast again.

Bullock Urges More Publicity On Investment

By the Associated Press.

A maximum of publicity to prevent abuses in investment trust management was suggested to the Securities Commission yesterday by Hugh Bullock, vice president of the New York group of trusts which bear his name.

Concluding testimony on what the the commission should and should not suggest to Congress in the way of regulatory legislation, Bullock said:

'Outweighing all other considerations combined is publicity. Bright sunlight is always the public's best protection. Respecting new issues of investment companies' securities, the public already has that protection under the securities act. Regarding such companies' subsequent operation, it would be in order to require detailed reports to be mailed to security holders at least quarterly."

He suggested these reports should be standardized, both as to form and accounting methods.

"So far as shareholders are concerned," Bullock said, "we feel they should have a voice in their company's affairs comparable to the size of their respective interest."

He added another desirable restriction might be that no officer or director of an investment company and no firm or company of which he was a member, officer, or director, should deal as principal in connection with purchase or sale of portfolio securities of his company.

Farther than this, he suggested that the commission should remain silent. He said to lay down rigid rules as to capital structure size, how far the trust's portfolio should be diversified, and what constituted right management and administrative policies to give maximum protection was a function "beyond the genius of anyone."

"Tell the public what it is," he urged. "Let them decide whether its securities are adaptable to their requirements. Publicity is their best safeguard."

Tardy British Sailors Denied Ration of Rum

London, Oct. 15 (AP).—Twenty members of the crew of H. M. S. Guardian were deprived of their daily tot of rum for three months today because they were tardy about falling in at daylight on a chilly morning recently. They also were denied their usual three hours of leisure daily for the same period.

The admiralty stated the "incident consisted of reluctance and a short delay in falling in. The normal routine of the ship was not affected." The sailors complained they had had insufficient rest.

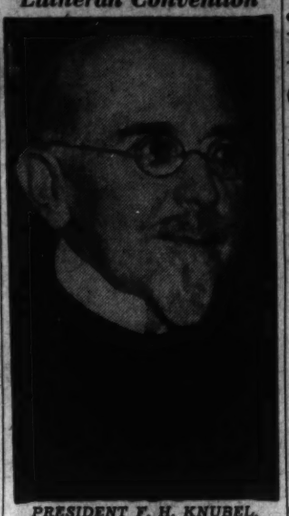
Lutheran Convention



PRESIDENT F. H. KNUBEL, of New York, who opened the tenth biennial convention of the United Luthern Church at Columbus, Ohio.

2 Reich Bishops Foresee Union Of Lutherans

Prelates Discuss German Conditions at Ohio Church Session.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 15.—Two leaders of the Lutheran Church in Germany, visioning a world union, told the tenth biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church tonight that there was no decided trend in their country for a "free" church entirely independent of the state.

Bishop August Marahrens, of Hanover, president of the Lutheran World Convention, declared that economic and social conditions in Europe had not interfered with progress of the church.

War, he declared, was out of the question in Germany. "As far as Germany is concerned we shall have continued peace," he asserted.

Speaking in German, Bishop Marahrens outlined at tonight's mass meeting progress of the world convention in drawing together various Lutheran bodies.

"As our Lutheran churches in Europe have come closer and closer to one another, we believe all Lutherans the world over will be drawn eventualy into one great convention," he said.

The convention delegates re-elected at their first business session today their officers, including Dr. F. H. Knubel, 66-year-old New Yorker, who has headed the United Lutheran Church since its establishment in 1918; E. Clarence Miller, of Philadelphia, for 18 years its treasurer, and Dr. G. W. Greever, of New York, starting his third term as secretary.

Japan to Fight British Loans, Chinese Assert

Nation Declares, However, Opposition Would Not Halt Acceptance.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Friday), Oct. 16.—Chinese officials today said they expected a new and vigorous declaration from the Tokyo foreign office reasserting Japan's "dominant position in eastern Asia" as result of confirmation of reports that Britain is prepared to grant extensive credits to China.

Simultaneously, it was announced in Nanking that "due to the difficulty in making preliminary arrangements," the conference on Chinese-Japanese problems—including the assassination of half a dozen Japanese residents of China during recent months by Chinese nationalists—between Foreign Minister Chang Chun and Japanese Ambassador Shigeru Kawagoe, has been postponed until next week.

Chinese said their reports from Tokyo indicated the Japanese government had decided to oppose the proposed British credits to China; which have been viewed here as designed to warn Japan that she is not going to be allowed to continue her intensive economic penetration of China without opposition.

They recalled that when the United States granted wheat and cotton loans to China Japan retaliated with the famous "hands off China" declaration made by the Tokyo foreign office spokesman, Eiiji Amau.

They expected that Japan's attitude would be that no government should make loans or grant credits to China without Japan's prior assent, since such funds might be used by the Chinese to finance hostilities against Japan.

Bullitt Outlines U. S. Peace Moves

Paris, Oct. 15 (AP).—William C. Bullitt, new United States ambassador to France, today declared America is taking steps for the "restoration of common sense in its international economic relations." He spoke before the American Club.

Outlining economic steps which he said constituted a stride toward world peace, Ambassador Bullitt said the first of these was the American Administration's trade treaty policy.

"We are determined to pursue this policy, and it is our hope that increasing international co-operation in the economic field may lead to a lessening of the strain in the political field," he declared.

The ambassador called America's monetary collaboration with France and Great Britain "clear evidence of our desire to reconstruct a basis for an orderly and happy international life."

3 'Baby Marts' Offer Children For Sale Here

Operating Within the Law, They Place Illegitimates in Homes for Fee.

doptive parents never learn the infant's identity. The mother never knows who adopted her child.

Establishments in which such transactions are made are well within the law. They are licensed by the District of Columbia Health Office as suitable boarding homes for children. One, at least, functions on such exceptionally high basis that friends and clients have suggested it should be endowed. Supervised by a sympathetic, able woman, this home has existed in Washington more than a dozen years and is indorsed by a number of leading pediatricians on the score that its manager exercises "the utmost care in placing infants in good homes," and "in investigating the background of each child she takes."

In the other two homes little time is given over to any investigation. But they, too, are well within the law. In none of these establishments is there an admission on the part of either the adopting parents or the agent that a baby is actually bought. Money enters into the transaction, they say, merely "to defray the cost incurred by keeping the child before it is adopted."

In numerous cases the children enter homes far superior to the ones in which they would live with their natural mothers. In most instances they receive good treatment up to the time of adoption. The utmost secrecy surrounds the unmarried mother's confinement and the disposition of the child. No loose ends are left dangling after the transaction is completed. All within the law; all to the advantage of unmarried mothers, their illegitimate children and the adoptive parents, say the agents and many of their clients.

Other Questions Posed.

But welfare workers in the District see the picture from a different point of view. They not only recognize the dangers involved in the practice, but realize what tragedies might result if totally unscrupulous persons began bartering illegitimate babies. Welfare workers ask further:

Is it right for any agent to take newly born infants from mothers at a time when the latter are not in a suitable frame of mind and physical condition to decide the wisdom of giving away their own flesh and blood?

Is the health of the child endangered if it is taken away from its natural mother so soon after birth?

Do childless couples, eager to adopt a baby and preferring secrecy, run the danger of accepting a child that may be epileptic or feeble-minded? If they make no investigation themselves, how can adoptive parents be sure of the child's possibilities and heredity?

What are the child's chances of being placed in a proper home when there is a possibility some agents are, or will be, in the business purely for commercial gain?

The dangers implied by such questions as these are too obvious to be allowed, District welfare workers believe. The cure? A law to replace the one that has been on the statue books here for 30 years and that permits hasty adoption of children at any age, without adequate investigation. The Juvenile Protective Association, the Board of Public Welfare, the Council of Social Agencies and seven other District of Columbia organization are now strongly supporting a proposed adoption law, which would curb activity in Washington's baby marts, and would protect both adoptive parents and adopted children.

safety regulations by the Federal Government," Col. Oehmann said.

"It is true that it might cost thousands of dollars to remodel the roofs of these buildings and to meet the other requirements of the District code. But it is a question of remodeling the buildings to meet requirements of the code or revising the code to meet requirements of architects.

"I intend to oppose any lessening of the safeguards written into the code for the protection of lives."

District inspectors will continue their checks on the mechanical condition of Federal elevators whenever they are requested to do so by Government officials, Col. Oehmann said.

But, as in the past, the District inspectors will be without power to enforce compliance with their recommendations.

Would Close Them.

"If these elevators that have been refused certificates were in private buildings, we would seal them shut today and keep them out of operation until the regulations were complied with," said Chief Elevator Inspector Joseph M. Brown.

Col. Oehmann and Brown pointed out that the District code is drawn to anticipate unexpected breakdowns of automatic safety devices. Two feet above the normal landing level on the top floors of buildings elevators contact a safety buffer which is supposed to automatically bring the elevator to a stop. The District insists that from 3 to 7 feet, depending upon the speed of the elevator, be left as a factor above the buffer to allow the elevator to slow to a stop in case the automatic device was slow in operating.

John Dickinson, Bureau of Standards engineer and the Government's consulting expert on elevator problems, said the elevator shafts in the Triangle buildings comply with National Elevator Safety Code. He pointed out that miniature penthouses have been erected on the roofs of some of the Triangle buildings. They were not made high enough to comply with District standards because architects objected, he admitted.

But with the new and improved mechanism used in the Triangle buildings elevators, Dickinson pointed out, there is no possibility of them running over the safety margin allowed.

It was the complaint of a private building operator who had been forced to place his elevator machinery in a penthouse before he was allowed to operate his elevators that brought to light the Federal violations of the District safety codes.

"The Federal Government gets away without building penthouses and I don't see why the District had to pick on me," said the building operator.

under command of Gen. Gonzalez Pena. He believed the miners would hesitate to fire on their own wives and children.

House-to-House Raids.

Madrid, Oct. 15 (AP).—Socialist government police tonight dragged scores of persons to prisons in a series of house-to-house raids for hidden Fascists.

As the distant chuffing of giant trench-digging machines added to the nightmare of unreality on Madrid's streets, girding for approaching siege by Fascist rebel armies, police pressed vigorous renewal of their search for enemies of the government.

Repeated claims by Gen. Francisco Franco, commander in chief of the insurgent forces, that a secret "fifth column" of Fascist sympathizers has been organized inside Madrid—ready to aid Franco's four lines of marching men when the assault on Madrid begins—led the Socialist government to launch today's raids.

Senator Urges Law to Forbid Campaign Gifts

row morning, and until then we are assuming he will appear."

Jeffreys said the hearing, if held, would be public. He said the committee would have to decide upon appropriate future action if the subpena is ignored.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—A Republican spokesman charged tonight publication of the De Pont family's campaign contributions by Senator Guffey (Democrat), Pennsylvania, was an attempt to "intimidate" possible Republican contributors.

Guffey's statement, issued this morning, listed contributors of the Du Ponts and their business associates to the Republican fund as $383,000.

Robert H. Thayer, chairman of the Republican national finance committee for New York City, said:

"Senator Guffey admits that no crime has been committed in the making of these contributions. He admits that no irregularity is claimed in these gifts. The name of every contributor published in his list has been or will be by Saturday made public by the Republican National Committee to the clerk of the House.

"It is a plain attempt to intimidate others from giving to the Republican committee and slow up our present sweep to victory. I hope I shall not live to see the day when men and women will be browbeaten and intimidated to the point where they cannot contribute to any fund that will protect our common liberties.

"The New Deal is panicky—they know they are licked. They are using every foul means at their command to scare the people of this country into submission. How long are the citizens of America going to stand for this communistic form of oppression?"

The contributions as listed by Guffey were as follows:

Lammot du Pont, $105,000; Irenee du Pont, $95,000; Pierre S. du Pont, $84,000; A. Felix du Pont, $15,000; Henry B. du Pont, $12,000; Henry Belin du Pont, $5,000; P. S. du Pont, $5,000; Pierre S. du Pont, $5,000; S. Hallock du Pont, $5,000; William du Pont, $5,000; William du Pont, jr., $5,000; H. Fletcher Brown, vice president of the du Pont company, $5,000; R. R. M. Carpenter, vice president, $5,000; Charles C. Copeland, retired secretary of the company, $5,000; Lammot du Pont Copeland, junior executive, $5,000; T. S. Grasselli, vice president, $5,000; W. F. Harrington, vice president, $5,000; Harry Haskell, vice president, $5,000; W. S. Carpenter, chairman of the finance committee, $2,500; W. S. Carpenter, jr., and M. S. Carpenter, sons of W. S. Carpenter, $2,500; Jasper E. Crane, vice president, $1,000, and C. R. Mudge, active head of the legal department, $1,000.

Guffey pointed out that the list showed contributions in two instances by the same persons, but that all contributions were listed separately.

from me that I was still pushing on.

"What are you doing in the hole?" asked Bill.

"I'm girdling the District," I said simply.

"Why?" asked Bill, yawning.

"I'm glad you asked that question, because I've been trying to avoid it," I snapped bitterly.

"Well, let's get going," said Bill. "I brought you some coffee."

Remembering the old Latin phrase that means "there's nothing like a sound mind in a sound body except a good cup of coffee," I downed it and we were off.

Almost at once we came across the spoor of a street car. I lay with my ear to the ground, listening, but there were no approaching vibrations. Evidently the trail was old.

"We Must Be Off"

"Arise! He must be off!" I shouted.

"What are you talking like that for?" asked Bill.

"That's the way all explorers talk," I answered. "That's because they're intrepid. I've got a complaint from the office that I haven't been using the word 'intrepid.' All explorers and girdlers have to be intrepid. Look at Admiral Byrd, look at Martin Johnson."

"I'd rather look at Mrs. Johnson," sulked Bill.

Giving him a nice concussion over the ear, I ordered a new start, and we shoved on through Chillum, past the Catholic Medical Missionaries Building, down Puerto Rico avenue and up Bates road to Varnum street, where we turned northeast out Sargent road to the line, having been forced to circle the vast wilderness between Chillum and St. Joseph's Seminary.

Here Bill began arguing that it was lunch time. There was no use arguing with him, and, besides, I was hungry myself, so we ate our meager rations of two planked steaks with French fried onions, at a place called "Joe's Delicatessen and Cafe."

An Odd Amusement.

Here we noticed an odd amusement of the natives of this region, in which one places a coin in a slot, pulls a handle, watches some revolving markers go around, and waits for a lot of coins to come out. We waited quite a while but no coins came out, and an old inhabitant told us that he had never in his life seen any coins issue in what he called "a jackpot." Noting this quaint term down, and musing over this odd native game, we left the place to the muttered curses of the proprietor, whom we had forgotten to tip.

Once more we picked up Eastern avenue, the northeast boundary of the District, as it started up out of the ground in North Woodridge, and found it a very good road indeed for several blocks, when it ran into Bladensburg road and disappeared again into the grounds of the National Training School for Boys.

This presented a delicate problem, as neither of us is exactly a boy any longer, and we're both out of training. We decided to skirt the grounds, and thus ran directly into the great swamps and impassable sloughs of Water Gardens and Deanewood, which extend all along the Anacostia River.

For the first time we were forced to concede to Nature. Retracing our steps all the way back to Bladensburg road, we headed southeast on it all the way to where Florida avenue joins Benning road, crossed the Anacostia on the Benning Bridge, and then struck northeast again on Kenilworth avenue to the Line.

Crops Up Again.

Here Eastern avenue cropped up again, marking off Maryland from the District in a new and worse form. There is some doubt that this is the worst road in the world, but not much. I remember a section in Wyoming where four-foot-deep potholes and three-foot ruts made the going difficult, but that road seemed a pleasant memory beside the jagged excavation which the District has laughingly chosen to dub "Eastern avenue."

We picked our way through this until we reached Sixty-third street northeast, at Seat Pleasant, Md., where the Line crosses by the back door of the little white Seat Pleasant Bank, and staggers off to its southeast corner.

Now the Line threads southwest past Capitol Heights. If there is a road worse than Eastern avenue, it is Southern avenue. That is, if you can find Southern avenue. Most of the time we couldn't. Near Easy place southeast we definitely lost it. We thought we could plow intrepidly on, but Fate said otherwise.

"Otherwise," said Fate.

Marlen E. Pew, Veteran Editor, Is Dead at 58

Throat Affection Is Fatal in New York Hospital; Famous for Column.

Marlen E. Pew, vice president and editor of Editor and Publisher, and veteran newspaperman, died in a hospital in New York City late yesterday. Pew, who was 58 years old, had undergone a throat operation there.

A native of Niles, Ohio, Pew began his newspaper career with the Cleveland Press back in 1890. He worked there until 1897, when he joined the Scripps-McRae Press Association as its New York representative. He held this post until 1900, when he joined the staff of the New York Evening Journal.

Two years later he became Eastern manager of the Newspaper Enterprise Association. In 1907 he joined the staff of the Boston Traveller, and he was news manager of this publication until 1912.

He helped organize the United Press in 1912, and became its first general news manager. Later he was editor of the Philadelphia News-Post.

In 1917, when the United States entered the World War, he was appointed press representative of Secretary of War Newton D. Baker, and later he organized the War Department News Bureau, originating the American system of publishing war casualty lists.

He also was credited with being the originator of the system adopted by the Army and Navy of authorized statements for press publication.

He became editor and manager of the International News Service in 1919, and held this post until 1922, when he became vice president and editor of Editor and Publisher.

Pew was a trustee of Science Service, Inc., and a member of the advisory board of the Columbia School of Journalism. He was a former chairman of the New York Business Papers Conference, and a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and Sigma Delta Chi fraternities.

He was a Democrat and belonged to the National Press Club here.

Last spring, wearying of the routine of his office duties, Pew took leave of absence and attended the ceremonies incident to the independence of the Philippines. He then continued his trip, girdling the world and interviewing newspaper publishers in the Orient and in Europe.

Pew was famous for his column which he conducted for years in Editor and Publisher, "Shop Talk at Thirty." He resided in Wading River, Long Island, and maintained his offices in the Times Building, New York City.

A graduate of Washington and Lee University, Pew is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Pew, a daughter, Susan Margaret Pew, and two sons, Marlen E., jr., and Samuel H. Pew.

Funeral arrangements had not been completed late yesterday.

Limited Power Over Utilities Held Sufficient

Present Control Adequate, Commissioner Tells Kiwanis Club.

Advantages of Government regulation of utilities rather than government ownership were pointed out yesterday by J. Fred Johnson, jr., of the Federal Communications Commission, at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis Club at the Mayflower.

"It is a salutary and necessary thing to have a Government agency to regulate any utility that serves as many people as the telephone, telegraph, cable and radio," he said. "By having a commission to investigate and suggest changes, to hold up the hand and say, 'Halt!' at certain times, the American public is protected."

Economics Cited.

Getting the facts about each utility is the first step in adjusting its service to the needs and the purse of the public, he continued. "Such investigation costs money, of course. Shortly after the Federal Commission came into existence, a survey was made in regard to a certain utility company, and the cost of conducting a thorough investigation was computed. Congress appropriated $750,000 to carry this on. Since that inquiry began, changes have been inaugurated that have saved the public $9,000,000."

Emphasizing that his remarks were not reflections on the utility corporations, he said, "the aim of the commission is to see that the public gets good service at fair rates; that the utilities make a fair profit, and no more. If Federal regulation is not successful, Government ownership and operation, such as other countries have, is the only alternative."

More One-Man Cars.

E. D. Merrill, general manager of the Washington Rapid Transit Co., spoke on "Cheaper and Better Service on Capital Buses and Street Cars," and said that 20 additional one-man cars have been, or will be put into operation in the District to make service more economical and more efficient.

The need for new X-ray equipment at Children's Hospital was described by Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, and members of the club appropriated $500 toward the purchase of such equipment.

Harold Marsh was presented with a silver cup as winner in the latest achievement contest sponsored by the club. Bynum E. Hinton, Kiwanis president, was in charge of the program.

Another Janus.

In recent addresses President Roosevelt has reiterated charges that his political opponents tell one story in the West and another one in the East; one story in the city and another story on the farm. The criticism has justification, but the President ought to be reminded that his own official family has a habit of telling different stories to the electorate without bothering to reconcile conflicts.

Chairman Jones of the RFC, for instance, has just delivered a telling attack upon the new tax on undistributed corporate profits, urging extensive modifications before the measure has even been tested out. His suggestions that changes be made to permit the accumulation of reasonable reserves, to assist indebted corporations and to encourage capital expenditures, is equivalent to a sweeping indictment of the present law.

His further assertion that he has "every confidence" that the President will be willing for Congress to review this measure stands in sharp contrast to the views expressed by the President last March when he urged Congress to apply a graduated levy to undistributed corporate income as a means of forcing disbursement of dividends and preventing tax evasion by large taxpayers through reinvestment of corporate surplus.

So far the Administration has given no hint of any intention to recede from its earlier position. The Treasury attitude is reported to favor no immediate modification and the President has shown no signs of yielding ground, despite a strong barrage of criticism. Yet repeal of this ill-advised measure would do much to strengthen the President's assurances that the present Administration is not hostile to business and that it desires to give scope to private initiative.

In this instance, lack of consistency would be regarded as a virtue by those who, like Mr. Jones, comprehend the serious social consequences of levying punitive taxes upon the process of capital accumulation through the reinvesment of corporate savings.

Straws In The Labor Dispute.

The controversy within the American Federation of Labor became an open breach a few weeks ago when the executive council refused either to compromise or to postpone the showdown until the annual convention meets next month. Now it appears that negotiations for a settlement are at a standstill because the Committee for Industrial Organization is not in a compromising mood.

John L. Lewis has taken the attitude that the C. I. O. will consider a settlement of differences with the executive council when the suspended unions under his leadership are reinstated in the federation, but not before. In many respects this ultimatum can be justified. The executive council arbitrarily suspended the ten unions which are working to expand the labor movement along industrial rather than craft lines. Since the council acted in haste, the C. I. O. evidently thinks repentance at leisure would be in order.

President Green has partially recognized his mistake by holding out an olive branch to the insurgent unions. Of course, he is eager to avert a split that may seriously weaken the influence of organized labor. But these dangers were as apparent before the C. I. O. unions were suspended as they are today. More positive compromise efforts undoubtedly should have been made before the minority was thrown out of the federation.

It is obvious, however, that if each side arbitrarily refuses to make any concessions when its position seems advantageous, no compromise will ever be reached. Throughout the controversy it has been evident that more than organization policies are at stake. Powerful political influences have entered the dispute. In fact, there are some indications that politics was a factor in forcing suspension of the C. I. O. unions and now plays a part in Mr. Lewis' refusal to meet the executive council half way.

Organized labor will have to remain on guard if it is to avoid being drawn into fights that may be identified with the political ambitions of certain of its leaders. Some observers believe that Mr. Lewis is more interested in building a political machine than in developing the economic power of trade unionism as a whole. And such a trend would probably hamper the effectiveness of the C. I. O.'s demands that the mass-production industries be organized more efficiently.

Doctor Or Architect?

With that happy faculty of sensing where his defenses are weakest, President Roosevelt, in his important campaign speech at Chicago, strongly emphasized belief "in private enterprise as the backbone of economic well-being in America." And, with deft political skill, he devoted a large part of his argument to drawing a distinction between "the overwhelming majority of business men" and the monopolistic leaders who, he claimed, "dragged the system of private profit and free enterprise to the brink of ruin."

Illinois, with 29 electoral votes, follows only New York and Pennsylvania in its importance to both candidates. Both camps list it as doubtful territory, with a slight leaning to the Republican camp. Moreover Chicago, in addition to being the home of Col. Knox, is a hotbed of antagonism to the New Deal. The President's strength there is much less than in most of the other great urban centers.

As a very clever campaigner Mr. Roosevelt naturally trims his sails to the winds prevailing at any given point. Yet it is significant that for Chicago he chose as his text: "The people of America have no quarrel with business."

The question is, to what extent do such encouraging assurances outweigh Mr. Roosevelt's persistent refusal to specify even the general direction which his policy would follow in the event of re-election. The present Democratic platform "proposes"—the word is significant—"to maintain the letter and spirit of the Constitution." From this it may be inferred that there will be no repetition of such centralization of control as was attempted in the early stages of the New Deal. But since 1932 Mr. Roosevelt has clearly shown that he intends to dispose of what his party platform proposes, or even "solemnly promises."

Moreover the Chicago speech, like all those delivered by the President in this campaign to date, is less remarkable for what it says than for what it omits. It provides no definite clue as to the general direction of the policy he would follow if re-elected. Thus it is sharply at variance with Mr. Landon's candid pledge, made at Detroit this week, that: "If I am elected I shall recommend to Congress the repeal of all acts giving autocratic powers to the Chief Executive."

During the present Administration the American people have in effect given President Roosevelt a book of blank checks, to fill in for such purposes and for such amounts as seem desirable to him. Now he is asking for another such book, valid for another four years. And his justification for this request really boils down to the argument that since economic improvement has coincided with the period of untrammeled check writing, further blanket authority to continue the process is in order.

Such an argument is totally illogical. Recovery has not strengthened the case for a continuation of arbitrary executive powers. It has weakened it. Or, to embroider Mr. Roosevelt's own favorite medical metaphor, it is not surprising that after four years convalescent patients should show a tendency to throw their crutches at the doctor. Most of us would be inclined to do the same if the doctor had carried his medical duties to the point of renovizing the entire house at the owner's expense.

What Dr. Roosevelt now seemingly realizes is that resentment against his blank-check policy extends rather far beyond the Du Pont family and the membership of the Liberty League. At Chicago he indicated a dawning appreciation of the fact that quite a few who can scarcely be called economic royalists are considering voting against him on November 3. It will be good Democratic politics if the doctor will go further in assuring his convalescent patient that the time is here for packing up some of the patent medicines and nostrums which lie strewn around in such profusion.

Invitation To Tragedy.

There is a very ironic note in reports that the Government, which imposes strict safety regulations on private buildings in the District, is operating elevators that endanger the lives of passengers. Fortunately the National Parks Service is hastening to replace the most obsolete elevators, but it is not likely that unnecessary risks will be eliminated until the present system of safety regulations is modified.

Following the disclosure that unsafe lifts are being operated in several Federal buildings, it develops that elevators in the Government's new structures in the Triangle are being operated without permits. The building inspector has declined to issue such permits because these elevators do not conform to District regulations. Here is certainly an anomalous situation. In erecting new buildings the Government itself has violated safety regulations set up for the National Capital.

As a matter of fact, there is no systematic effort to maintain the same standards of safety in Federal buildings that are imposed upon privately owned structures. The District government has lent the Federal Government an elevator inspector, but he does his work only upon invitation from the National Parks Service. At present that inspector has instructions to investigate elevators in all Federal buildings regularly. But when his reports are made, there is no means of putting unsafe elevators out of use. Thus the safety of Government employes and the public visiting these buildings is left to the uncertain discretion of custodians who in turn must depend upon Congressional appropriations to correct dangerous defects.

It is extremely fortunate that no serious accident has as yet happened under this haphazard lack of system, especially in view of the fact that the Government has taken over many buildings not originally designed for the use to which they are now put. Not only are new elevators needed, but also an entirely new system of supervision. The desirability of forcing all governmental agencies here to comply with District safety regulations is not open to question. Whether authority to force such compliance is to be lodged in Federal or District officials, that responsibility can not too soon be definitely fixed.

Belgium's Second Thought.

At the time of the Paris peace conference an offer was made to Belgium to restore the neutrality agreement of 1839, which Germany in 1914 had treated as a "scrap of paper." The little kingdom, however, would have no more of such false security. Instead it proceeded to negotiate a defensive military alliance with France and to link its fate with that of its southern neighbor.

Now, after 17 years, Belgium has had a change of heart. The treaty of 1839 is dead beyond hope of revival. But neutrality through voluntary action is, in the opinion of a large section of the Belgian people, something that can be attained by cutting loose from the French chariot, by taking no sides between the dominant powers and by keeping up the nation's own defenses for purely national ends. Their attitude, in a nutshell, appears to be: "If the Netherlands can do it, why not we?"

The ostensible reason for this revolutionary change in policy is that the destruction of the Locarno treaty by Germany, followed by the militarization of the Rhineland, has placed Belgium in an extremely dangerous position. Unless their nation takes decisive measures to withdraw from the turmoil, the Belgians feel, it may again play its historic and tragic role as the cockpit of Europe. For with the Maginot line protecting France on the east, invasion of that country from the north, as in 1914, is again presumable. With that situation to face, "alliances," King Leopold told the cabinet, "even defensive ones, would not serve us."

But this explanation is obviously inadequate. No more now than in 1914 is Belgium in a position to defend itself by its own efforts. However, its leaders are convinced that with an alliance or without, France and Great Britain could not afford to leave Belgium to the mercies of an invader. At the same time the absence of any alliance between Belgium and France might make it possible for Belgium to stay out of any war involving France that does not involve an invasion of Belgian territory.

It is easy to sympathize with the feelings of the Belgian people and government. Like other small nations Belgium sees itself drawn into the maelstrom by virtue of its role as the satellite of a great power. Yet it is questionable whether in the event of a Russo-German war, which sooner or later might involve France and France's remaining allies and ultimately, no doubt, all Europe, Belgium could really remain aloof.

For better or for worse Belgium's fate is linked up with the fate of its neighbors. Isolation is a difficult role for any nation to play—even one as remote from the potential scene of carnage as is the United States. For a country in the very heart of the European continent, on the cross-roads of Armageddon, it is all but impossible. Only if Europe is at peace can Belgium be at peace.

A Correction.

An unfortunate error appeared in The Post's editorial on Wednesday, October 14, entitled "The People's Counsel." By the inadvertent insertion of the word "not" the last sentence was given a meaning precisely opposite to what was intended. It should have read: "But experience of the last few years indicates that competent advocates for the people can be readily found."

An ornithologist tells us that he has seen an albatross scratching his head with his foot while flying. We had always thought well of the albatross, and had no idea he would do such an undignified thing as scratch his head with his foot while flying in public.

An automobile should be so constructed that long or frequent tooting of the horn would actuate mechanism which would switch off the ignition, apply the brakes and hit the driver over the head with a medium-size sledge hammer.

According to an economist, "The peak of the present era of prosperity will be reached early in 1939, from which point a descending curve will begin." Don't tell us we're soon to be run over and flattened by another economic cycle!

A Washington naturalist says that, contrary to popular belief, the owl is not a wise bird at all. The same thing is doubtless true of the cynics who keep late hours and hoot at everything.

Distribution of wealth will be continued just as long as a rich man has any of these relatives: Uncle Sam, a wife, sons, daughters.

WPA Supervision.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Relative to the letter regarding conditions in the WPA in Pennsylvania, I would say that the same conditions exist right here in Washington. In several divisions of the Internal Revenue Bureau there are sections which have two supervisors over five employes, they in turn are supervised by two chiefs, and over them there are three chiefs presiding.

These sections are so divided that higher grades may be given to the favorites, whose entire families plus the uncles, aunts and cousins may receive their share of the political pie.

They are not provided with shovels to lean upon, but spend the day reviewing the social activities of the night before, and discussing prospective advancements based on affiliations for the purpose of getting something for nothing, where a day's work is an unknown quantity.

"Beautiful Vision."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It's too bad the Republican nominee for President, as well as Vice President, isn't named "Knox," for that's all either of them seems able to give. Carlyle said "It takes a bigger mind to discern beauty than to detect faults." Roosevelt does not have to resort to "knocks." He's full of beautiful, constructive vision. So much criticism shows the unlovely color of the other's viewpoint.

Landon may well remember that to give a good impression he must get one. But we have only pity for him. It's pathetic that he would allow himself to be pitted against a man like Roosevelt and for such an office. It would, of course, take a man of his type to become the tool of those who put him in.

The Communist Candidate.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Amid the breast-beating and tub-thumping over the rape of Earl Browder's constitutional rights recently in Terre Haute, one cannot but wonder what sort of a hand would be dealt the opposition in a similar situation under a Communist government of the U. S. A.

Fancy a counter revolutionary candidate for President of the People's Council being permitted—yea, invited—to address the Moscow newspaper 'boys' soviet, and in the shadow of the Kremlin! Only fancy!

Of course I have not sufficient naivete to believe that the National Press Club was interested in the Communist candidate's description of the New Jerusalem. They merely wanted to see a big-shot radical at close range; to compare the flesh with the old-fashioned cartoonist conception of a Nihilist with a smoking bomb and a face like a Halloween goblin. But in spite of all this, there was an aura of liberalism about that gathering, and Mr. Browder got a break that he never, never would give. The Washington newspaper corps can be eminently fair when it wishes.

A fair cross-section of Browder's tactics could be gathered from his Labor Day speech, which was almost wholly an appeal to the passions and prejudices of the farmers of the New York milkshed. He harped on 3-cent milk and blamed Wall Street, but not a peep out of him anent high-salaried milk wagon drivers in the Big Town. Earl is just an old smoothie, but he isn't going to get away with it.

Culling The Bureaus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Well, Landon has lashed out. He became specific. Even the vitriolic Ickes who, between perfervid foggings of the unsavory New Deal spending issue, has pleaded for something specific, has got his wish.

His pledge to turn loose the surplus help in Washington was a courageous statement, one the Dealers always sedulously avoid. A wholesale culling is vitally necessary—and a break for the taxpayer. But it's a safe bet such reform will never occur under Roosevelt, to whom a stated course of action is just something to be reversed in his next public utterance.

The bureau I "work" for should be among the first to feel the axe. It expresses the last word in uselessness. Its extinction has been overdue several years. Instead of which new recruits, laid off from other bureaus, are added to our swollen ranks each month.

All sane beneficiaries know this fool's paradise can't last forever, that the bottom of the gravy keg is in sight. The political parasites—the straw bosses who clip newspapers at $4,000-$6,000 per annum—will set up a squawk, of course. And they'll vote for Roosevelt, for only under him and the chaos of squandermania he has created, can they hope to retain place—and regular handouts.

Hybla Valley.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The matter brought to the attention of Washington citizens through a letter written by Charles E. Cross which recently appeared in your columns is of much interest. There should be an earnest effort on the part of this community to bring the Hindenburg to Hybla Valley, or an area adjacent to Washington, by establishing facilities that may be necessary to make such an airport.

Who can predict what the future will bring in respect to this mode of travel? The business interests of our city may well be alert, to the end that we shall have the benefit that will come to us through this port being at our doorstep.

Be assured that the hotels of this city, as was suggested, are much interested in the undertaking and will render their support to any concerted effort to establish at the place designated, or any other desirable nearby place, such a port.

It is my opinion that Mr. Cross has rendered a public service in bringing this to the attention of the community.

The People's Counsel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thank you for your editorial of October 14 advocating the continuance of a people's counsel to represent the "people before the Public Utilities Commission and the courts."

The Federation of Citizens' Associations is alike responsible for the enactment of the public untilities act of 1913 and for the act creating the office of people's council of 1924.

The late Representative Zihlman was chairman of the House District Committee and Senator Capper chairman of the Senate District Committee when the people's counsel law was enacted.

Both committees unanimously recommended its passage upon the showing then made before them of its urgent need. Both Senate and House, by a practically unanimous vote, passed the act and President Coolidge approved it.

Nothing has happened since to discourage or lessen its admitted value to the people.

The office has proven its worth through the years that have passed, and its worth to the people is now greater than ever.

The High Tradition Of Labor Statistics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of October 14 carried the notice of the death of Ethelbert Stewart, long chief statistician of the Bureau of Labor, and later commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. In an obituary The Post quoted one of his characteristic observations. The inclusion of this observation was peculiarly appropriate and significant, for it epitomized, in a sense, not only his experience as an individual but also his era as a phase in American development.

Historians have been wont to stress the significance of acquisitive-minded personalities in our national life—the influence of those whose environment, opportunities and talents have evolved into the amassing of obviously great wealth or influence. Less spectacular, but no less integral, a part in our national evolution has been played by certain nonacquisitive, inquiring, social-minded types of personalities. These, too, have evolved naturally from their own peculiar environments, opportunities and talents. Perhaps, though much less noted, their influence has been no less pervasive.

In the life of the former chief statistician is a capital illustration of the evolution of this latter type in the American scheme of things. Born in 1857, in the agitated Illinois of the pre-emancipation era, his adolescent years were lived in this same region. There the Grangers were fighting against exorbitant railroad rates, the Greenbackers against hard money and the Liberals against political corruption. This was indeed the locale of Middle West protest, at a period when the protest frequently was idealized into a thing sanctified. Here, as everywhere else in the United States, the complex total of forces dominant in the region was molding, willy-nilly, future citizens of the entire country.

The directive force of the Illinois impetus obviously persisted through all of Stewart's subsequent life. As a mere youth, he gave early proof of the annealing of his temperament with his environment by editing the Knights of Labor Bulletin in Chicago. When, in 1888, he campaigned for election to the House of Representatives, it was on the "Union Labor" ticket and in the Fourteenth Illinois District, where protest burned fiercely in the hearts of many. Meanwhile, in the year when the first interstate commerce act became law (1887), he became identified with the United States Bureau of Labor. His affiliation with workers' interests continued, in one form or another, through the next 45 years.

During that long period, marked by vast adjustments in the form and direction of economic life in the United States, there were two major depressions and several minor ones. These booms and recessions were graphed in the statistics of, first, the Bureau of Labor (established as part of the Interior Department in 1884) and, from 1913, in the Department of Labor. Persistently the work was pursued, with some widening of the field resulting from first-hand study of factors working in Europe and South America.

As the scope of the statistics widened, their tremendous importance, as indices of the success or failure of public policy, came to be appreciated. Their precise direction, therefore, became the vital concern of tariff makers, politicians, statesmen and all other persons searching them for justification or reward. But the chief statistician who had been reared in the Middle West—with its potent combination of harsh realism and imaginative idealism—would not corrupt his data. He had for his figures that deep respect which any workman feels for a job he has struggled to do well. He knew that, in any case, long-time trends have no power obligingly to yield for any special purpose.

American Politicana

"I TREAD in the footsteps of illustrious men," said Martin Van Buren as he delivered his inaugural address, "in receiving from the people the sacred trust confided to my illustrious predecessor."

The Presidents of the United States are called upon to make many speeches. Some of them are commonplace efforts, nearly all contain numerous platitudes, but some contain real gems of thought in a new dress or so aptly put as not to be forgotten. The high caliber of Presidential oratory is no happenso, for the Chief Executive usually has great ability both as a speaker and a doer.

"I wish to preach not the doctrine of ignoble ease," Theodore Roosevelt told the Hamilton Club of Chicago in 1899, "but the doctrine of the strenuous life." This human dynamo was no idle dispenser of words; he lived as he preached.

"The only man who never makes a mistake," said the successor to William McKinley, "is the man who never does anything." "T. R." made mistakes, as any human being will; but the fear of making them never deterred him from ever trying to do the greatest good for his fellow Americans.

• • •

JAMES A. GARFIELD strongly objected to staleness. "I must do something to keep my thoughts fresh and growing," he once announced, "as I dread nothing so much as falling into a rut and feeling myself become a fossil." His record does not reveal that he ever fell. Left fatherless when two years old, he had to have pluck to win his way to the White House. He was a canal-boat boy, driving a mule on the tow path. From his own experience he is said to have coined the Franklin-like maxim that "A pound of pluck is worth a ton of luck."

George Washington advised: "Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience." At another time he cautioned: "Associate with men of good quality if you esteem your own reputation, for it is better to be alone than in bad company."

In matters of government, Washington took a firm stand. What was his attitude toward other nations? He declared: "It is our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances with any portion of the foreign world." He made that utterance in his famous farewell address. When Andrew Jackson became the Chief Executive, he instructed the American ministers abroad to ask nothing but what is right, submit to nothing wrong."

• • • •

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS delivered a whole sermon on good citizenship when he asserted that "No man's vote is lost which is cast for the right." Even more brief was the statement by Rutherford B. Hayes, "He serves his party best who serves the country best." Grover Cleveland was still more economical in his use of words when he set forth this idea: "Honor lies in honest toil."

In the Declaration of Independence the author, Thomas Jefferson, wrote that "All men are created equal," and then amplified this through naming "certain inalienable rights" as "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." During his Presidency, Jefferson told Baron Humboldt: "When a man assumes a public trust, he should consider himself as public property."

The immortal Lincoln uttered: "Let us have faith that right makes might." Later, at the dedication of the Gettysburg monument, he voiced the resounding words "that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth." He had scribbled the notes for his brief address on the back of an old envelope, but it proved to be the masterpiece of its kind.

Do the historic walls of the White House inspire the Presidents to heights hitherto unreached? "They call forth the very best that a man can give," Herbert Hoover declared during his administration.

Goosebone Prophecy.

The albino squirrel on the White House Grounds has turned up with a coat of pure white and thus, according to the findings of amateur weather prophets, predicts a long, hard winter. It is impossible to be sure until the interpreters of goosebones report and there are accurate data on the thickness of corn shucks, the moss on the trees, the flight of geese and ducks, the number of black hairs on a caterpillar's back, and so on. As far as the White House squirrel is concerned, though, the die is cast.

The savants of the weather bureaus and meteorological stations take all such rule-of-thumb reasoning in their stride and content themselves with saying there is no scientific basis for any of it. That there may be more in it all than meets the brain is possible, for the science of today does have a way of becoming the superstitution of tomorrow, and vice versa. In the meantime, any credence for such thought in Washington is agreeable evidence that the folks there retain some part of the American tradition and are still susceptible to it.

Fair Enough

What Might Have Been.

Every time I see some reference to the vindictive folly of the Treaty of Versailles and the attempt to enslave a great people, I recall the loving kindness of the German nation toward its enemies and the hopeful augury of the treaty they made with the Russians when they had them by the throat.

A generous lot the Germans were, as they had demonstrated in their dealings with France in 1870, and when at last there came an end to the Great War, if they had been victorious no doubt they would have begged the pardon of the French for the unavoidable destruction of their towns and factories in the fury of the shuffle and repaired the damage at their own expense.

I assume, too, that they would have made no grab for the British colonies nor any move toward a reduction of the British navy, by contrast with the British treatment of theirs. And, although the Kaiser in the heat of anger had wired the King of Italy in 1915, "I shall never forget your perfidy," what he meant probably was that he intended to reward Italy with certain gifts along the Adriatic by way of returning good for evil and shaming an erring brother in the ermine.

In a way, it seems a shame the Germans didn't win, because surely the world would have been much better off today, so gracious were the Kaiser's hosts in all their terms with conquered people and so loath to exploit for sordid gain or the enhancement of their own prestige the helpless plight of a beaten foe.

Calais they would have left alone, because, after all, it wasn't really theirs, though theirs it would have been for the taking. Belgium would have been kept sovereign and independent and Germany would have helped her to her feet and brushed her off. It is grotesque to think they might have interfered with Britain's trade or soaked up Poland, except in a brotherly way for the Polish people's own protection, and if they had sent armies to parade along Whitehall or the Place de la Concorde, those troops would have gone as emissaries of peace, not to humiliate the natives or enforce the payment of cash indemnities.

The Germans, not being predatory but wishing only to live in peace and be let alone, would have made no passes at any islands off our coasts suitable for naval bases, would have reaffirmed the Monroe Doctrine without our asking, and, doubtless, would have let us keep our Navy intact. And, of course they would have spurned all thought of a cash penalty for our error in resisting their beneficial will.

• • • •

Yes, the Treaty of Versailles was a poisonous document inflicting vengeance on a noble race, but, there was no way of knowing at the time that Germany was kind and good. The French—those ingrates—thought the Treaty of Frankfort with its exactions of gold and territory had been rather harsh on them, and the rest of the world was puzzled and alarmed by the Germans' reticence when asked to name their aims.

Their intention was to help their neighbors and live on cordial terms with one and all but, like all great, gruff giants with a heart of gold and tender sentiments, the Kaiser and his people put on a rough exterior to conceal their sentimental nature. You sometimes hear of a heavy-handed, roaring bulldozer who beats his wife, kicks his dog and persecutes his employes not because of any brutal streak in his nature, but because, on the contrary, he doesn't want the world to know how kindly he really is.

But it seems unfair to blame the diplomats on the victorious side of the table for the absence of XXXs, denoting kisses, in the Treaty of Versailles. They were only representatives of their people and those people, being ignorant and still excited, demanded a little revenge. Not much revenge, to be sure, for they didn't insist on a victorious march through Berlin to humiliate the Germans in their own capital, or the sack of German cities. They just wanted to be good and sure their side had won, which is human nature among the lower orders for you.

The Germans, now, would have gone right back home if they had won the war, scorning territory, trade advantages, indemnities and humiliating demonstrations.

If the Germans still have kicking around in their archives a copy of the terms of peace which they were planning to offer their enemies, they owe it to the world to reveal the same as an example of sweet and noble magnanimity of a superior but misused race.

"Art Of Biography"

By William Lyon Phelps

Our Great Composers.

Yes, this is the book you have been looking for. It is handy in size, not very heavy, has about 660 pages, printed in clear type.

It is edited by A. L. Bacharach, with an introduction by H. C. Colles; and the publishers are E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

There are separate biographies of 28 musical composers, written by various authorities, and arranged in alphabetical order. The alphabet gets away to such a good start that it is almost topheavy, with Bach, Beethoven, Berlioz, Brahms, Byrd, and why on earth leave out Bizet?

• • • •

Chronologically, the list of composers begins with Palestrina and closes with the death of Elgar. No persons still alive are admitted.

The graphic chart at the end is interesting and convenient, showing in what periods the musicians were active. The nineteenth century is by far the richest.

Besides the omission of Bizet, two other omissions are conspicuous: Cesar Franck and Arthur Sullivan, the greatest composer ever produced by the English-speaking race.

• • • •

Has our editor anything against French composers? Bizet, D'Indy, Franck, Massenet, Gounod, Saint-Saens, Thomas. I grant the book is enormously useful, but I suggest that in the next edition the title be changed to "Lives of Some Great Composers," or, anyhow, leave out the word "the." It won't do to call these, as in the preface, "the world's greatest creative musicians."

The art of Biography
Is different from Musicography.
Musicography is about 'Cellos,
But Biography is about Fellows.

Ethiopia Now

Rights Of Natives And Foreigners Alike Being Ignored By Italian Conquerors, Says British Weekly.

(From the London Economist.)

WHEN THE Italians marched into Addis Ababa they drew round it a curtain of secrecy through which very little news has filtered. Occasional reports come through by one means or another, but the censorship is close and effective and becomes closer and more effective still the moment anything happens which is likely to be especially interesting to the world outside. When the Djibouti Railway was cut by raiding Abyssinians, the authorities hurried around to all the legations and closed their wireless plants, showing such a turn of speed that they arrived at all but one of them in front of the news itself.

Some facts, however, can be ascertained; and as the occupation of the town has lasted long enough for the Italian government's attitude toward its new possession to be defined, it is possible to deduce from the steps already taken what the policy of an authoritarian state in a dependent colony is likely to be.

Everything that has happened so far suggests that the government has avoided with complete success those disabling old-fashioned liberal ideas which emphasized the rights of the native and regarded the white man's burden as a trusteeship. There is to be no nonsense about the claims of the Abyssinians or the open door or the rest of the fusty apparatus of liberal-minded cononial administration.

Abyssinia is to be for the Italians, and foreigners will be shown unmistakably that they are not wanted. Already the work of clearance is begun, and both by direct and indirect methods the Italians are pushing the aliens towards a final departure. In some cases they either serve a notice of expulsion or more courteously express the hope that it will not be necessary to serve such a notice. In this way they have got rid both of an English chaplain and of an English lady who has devoted years of her active life to Abyssinia. In other ways they are making it so difficult for people to carry on their business that there will be no alternative to evacuation.

This method is naturally applied to members of the trading community, and it appears to be so thorough that even concerns which have voluntarily offered to become Italian receive the same treatment as those which stick to their old nationality.

To make clear what is happening it should be explained that for many years the business of Abyssinia has been largely in the hands of foreigners, who by and large are a fairly mixed bag. English interests have been represented by the Bank of Ethiopia (which still functions in the southwest, but at Addis Ababa is now absorbed by the Bank of Italy) and by the Asiatic Petroleum Co. British India has supplied Addis Ababa with a very considerable trading company and a number of smaller firms, while France has had the railway and one limited company of some importance controlled locally by an Austrian manager.

The rest of the trading has been mainly in the hands of Greeks and Armenians, who together represent probably about 65 per cent of the old business community. Some of these Levantines still remain in Addis Ababa, but the exodus began early, and several of them have already found new homes in various parts of the Eastern Mediterranean.

Foreigners Feeling Increasing Pressure.

FROM THE fact that the country's business is so largely in foreign hands, and that almost all the foreigners are engaged in trade, two things follow: first, that if trade is made sufficiently difficult all the foreigners will go; and secondly, that when they have disappeared, trading will have disappeared with them and the country's business will have to start again from zero. And that appears to be the Italians' objective. They are so resolutely determined to do without the foreigner that they are prepared to sacrifice all the country's old connections, all the old export trade, to restart it from nothing in a narrow channel that has Italy at one end and Addis Ababa at the other.

The device that the Italians are using to put the necessary pressure on the foreigner is a rigid control of currency. In the last ten years we have had illustrations enough of the tricks that frightened governments can play with currency, but the Abyssinian experiment is probably the first example of a currency being used for the deliberate destruction of a country's trade. The result is achieved by running two currencies, the lira and the old Maria Theresa dollar, in double harness with a fixed artificial unreal parity which it is a serious criminal offense to override. The true value of the lira in Maria Theresa dollars is about 10½ lire to the dollar and where anyone has courage enough to run a black market that is the rate at which the currencies change hands. But the official Italian rate is 5 lire to the dollar and at that figure only may trade be carried on.

Now the Ethiopian in general is a person of untutored mind and Gresham's law is not one of the familiar commonplaces of Ethiopian conversation. But the Ethiopian peasant is more ready to follow the law of Sir Thomas Gresham, of whom he has not heard, than the law of the Italian administrator with whom he is uncomfortably familiar, and the lira at 5 to the dollar has quickly driven the dollar itself out of circulation.

Peasants bringing their produce to market found not only that they were paid in lire but that they were searched on their way to market and relieved of any dollars that they had been rash enough to carry with them. Naturally, the dollars went to earth and the peasants postponed their visits to market, with the result that there was at one time a deficiency of food which was made good only with difficulty. There is believed still to be a shortage in the town of all but the bare necessities of life. And if the artificial exchange has made more difficult the trade between town and country, it has altogether exterminated the foreign trade.

Firms which have hitherto exported hides and other commodities to Europe or elsewhere are paralyzed. They cannot afford to buy in dollars and sell in lire, and even if they could they would not dare to bring money back into the country because of the tight restrictions on the export of currency. These restrictions are such that nobody wants to be paid in Abyssinia and those who have foreign credits (most of which arise from recent claims on insurance policies) are urged to have the payment made in some place other than Addis Ababa.

Trade of Land Now In Ruins.

THIS restriction on the export of currency is amazingly thorough. One person is allowed on leaving the country to take with him only 350 lire; and on the train to Djibouti passengers are turned inside out in search for money. They are taken down in parties to one end of the train and there their clothing is examined; their boots and socks are removed; sometimes they are stripped to the skin. And there seems to be nothing in the economic position—apart from the artificial parity between the two currencies—which can justify these extreme measures or make the Italians so fearful of a "run."

If, on the other hand, the measure is political and designed to drive the foreigner out, the motive is clear enough, and the machinery will certainly be effective. Under such conditions it is impossible either to export or to import, and as the foreigners in Addis Ababa cannot remain there unless they do both, the day must soon come—unless the currency restrictions are lifted—in which the foreign community will be chased out of the country.

At present the only part of Abyssinia which can carry on a trade with the civilized world outside is the southwest, which has not yet been submitted to the beneficial influence of an ancient civilization, and goes on in its old barbaric way, importing and exporting on a comparatively sound currency.

One of the many difficulties that the Italians have to face is naturally the French control of the railway, and already friction has occurred. The railway insisted on being paid its fares in dollars, and the government insisted on its accepting lire. For a time it seemed as though there would be a deadlock, with the Frenchman saying "I will have dollars" and the Italian saying "You shall take lire."

According to messages from Rome, the dispute ended in favor of Italy, the railway undertaking to accept lire and to buy its rolling stock from Italian manufacturers. That agreement will be satisfactory to the pride of Rome and may be a step toward the realization of her ambitions, but if those ambitions include, as doubtless they do, a net economic gain to Italy, the day of their complete fulfillment seems to be remote.

On Relief

An Editorial Review.

Praise And Censure.

In the opinion of the Hartford Courant, Gov. Landon's indictment of the Administration's relief program constitutes a real challenge to President Roosevelt. Says that journal:

The speech that Mr. Landon made at Cleveland on relief needed to be made. The humanitarianism claimed for the New Deal rests largely on its supposedly generous treatment of the unemployed. Yet in no undertaking have its experimental tendencies been more marked, in no undertaking have its extravagant methods been more evident, in no undertaking have its administrative deficiencies been more apparent. Although Mr. Landon was moderate in his criticism, the points that he made amply justified his conclusion that in the handling of relief the record of the Administration has been one of failure. Not only has the expense of handling cases steadily risen, but the system in force has not succeeded in facilitating the shifting of the unemployed from relief to jobs, despite growing industrial activity. . . .

The relief program outlined by Mr. Landon has the merit of simplicity, practicality and economy, and no matter how the election goes it will provide a starting point for a fresh attack on the whole problem. As nothing else so far in the campaign, it reveals the contrast between sober thinking and impulsive action in governmental affairs. Surely, both the unemployed and the taxpayers of the Nation could stand a little more of the former and considerably less of the latter in the conduct of the Government.

Gov. Landon's Cleveland arraignment of the Administration's relief record developed the thesis already expounded by him on other occasions—that it has been directionless, wasteful, politics-ridden and unproductive of permanent cure. Plenty of points can be made in support of each count. They have been made by Democratic critics as well as Republican. It is not to be gainsaid that the relief problem, as Gov. Landon said, is "the most urgent human problem that faces the American people at this hour" and that the Administration's errors of omission and commission in this field of Federal activity have been many.

But some points are to be made in its favor. Gov. Landon ignored them. There has been boondoggling and waste, but there has also been constructive work of lasting importance. But for the Federal relief program, for instance, Norfolk would not today possess the new Campostella and Lafayette River bridges, nor the new stadium nor the new academic building of William and Mary College.

There has been plenty of politics, but indispensable relief has been extended to millions of desperate people whose claims on the Federal Government for direct relief were sternly denied by President Hoover until the growing desperateness of the situation forced him toward the end of his term to approve a $300,000,000 direct-relief appropriation.

• • • •

Another Southern newspaper, the Atlanta Constitution, is highly critical of the Republican position:

The sum and substance of the Republican argument is that what the Democratic Administration has done is right, but that it has been done in the wrong way, therefore the Government should be turned back to the Republicans so that they may experiment with less expensive plans—assumedly with the recovery program, in the meanwhile, marking time.

The Democrats counter this weak and ineffective argument with the proof that the New Deal policies have brought back prosperity to every element of the Nation's people, and that the dollars spent by the present Administration have brought concrete results, while the billions spent by Hoover were worse than thrown away. The verification of these definite statements is a matter of simple arithmetic.

No wonder that the Republican campaign is getting nowhere when in one breath "liberal" relief is promised and in the next reduced spending for all purposes is pledged; when the farmer is told he has been "ruined" by the agricultural policies which have caused him to restrict his production, while the fact is he is getting two or three times as much for what he raises as he did when the Republicans were spending hundreds of millions of dollars through the Farm Board in ineffectual efforts to "rescue" him.

• • • •

But Gov. Landon has plenty of defenders. Says the Newark News:

The indictment drawn by Gov. Landon against the Roosevelt Administration for the way it has handled relief contains counts to which Harry Hopkins' rejoinder that "we have no apology to make for the money we have spent or the way we have spent it" is mere evasion. It answers nothing. Mr. Hopkins may continue to follow that line if he chooses, but he only discloses the weakness of his defense.

One of the Landon counts is that politics has been combined with Federal relief activities in a degree to constitute a national scandal. It surely has, admitting it was inevitable that politics would ultimately creep in. It would have happened regardless of the party in power, and when Mr. Roosevelt declared he would not permit such influence he was promising more than he or anybody else could perform. Mr. Roosevelt should have known better, but above all he should have seen that his WPA setup encouraged the very thing he had assured the Nation would not occur. That is the most generous view that can be taken so far as the White House is concerned with the conversion of the WPA into a vast political machine. But it doesn't remove the White House's responsibility.

And, more vehemently, the Chicago Tribune:

Gov. Landon has had the best of every exchange. He licked Mr. Roosevelt on social security at Milwaukee. He licked him at Chicago on the budget. Now he has licked him at Cleveland on relief. Mr. Roosevelt's pretense that his wild extravagances were necessitated by the sufferings of the people has been analyzed and disposed of. Gov. Landon has shown that with far less expense relief could have been made far more effective, and the unfortunate recipients would not have been condemned, as Mr. Roosevelt has condemned them, to a permanent and humiliating dependence.

That Auto-Airplane.

The United States Bureau of Air Commerce tried out in the streets of Washington an automobile-airplane, good on or off the ground. It can leave the ground within a few feet.

Of course, there are lot of automobilists who have been doing this Sunday afternoons for years. But this is the first time a car has been designed not to come down until the occupants are ready.

• • • •

The auto has a forward propeller to push it on land and a rotary set of blades to lift it into the ozone. It looks like a streamlined auto that has become tangled up with the ironwork of a merry-go-round. It is part flivver, part airplane and part flying trapeze.

A driver who has become tired of travel on the highway can take to the air by shifting gears, or vice versa. Some jolly week-ends on American highways are looked for when those week-end drivers start hurdling one another for innocent amusement.

Text of Roosevelt Speech

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Oct. 15.—The text of President Roosevelt's address here tonight.

I am standing at the spot in front of the city hall to which during the four terrible years, from 1929 to 1933, thousands of unemployed men and women of Detroit came to present problems of human existence to a great mayor, Frank Murphy.

I am glad that he is standing beside me today. His splendid record, first as governor general of the Philippines and later as high commissioner of the United States to the Commonwealth of the Philippines, stands out as one of the most successful administrations in our history. The whole country is proud of Frank Murphy and proud of what he has done.

I knew something of the problems of Detroit in the depression years, not only from Frank Murphy, but also from my brother-in-law, who was his city controller.

Pared Operating Expenses.

We all knew that during those years the Government of this city pared its operating expenses to the bone, using every penny it could scrape together for the relief of thousands of men and women who were literally on the verge of starvation. When money had to be raised, the mayor and controller would go to private bankers in New York, where they were compelled to pay very high interest rates for further loans.

By the spring of 1933 the city could borrow no more from private sources and the government of the State of Michigan was unable to render any substantial help.

I recite these facts because while the problem of human relief in Detroit was one of the most difficult in the Nation, yet there were thousands of other municipalities faced with the same kind of crisis.

Action Saved the Day.

Action—immediate action—by the new Federal Government in Washington, it is now admitted by all but the most blind partisans, was what saved the day. It was the only thing left which could save the day.

Relief and work relief through the use of Federal funds saved American humanity, and as the months went by it saved also the solvency of cities and States in every part of the Nation.

Following the arresting of the immediate crisis, our next step was to restore the purchasing power of the people themselves. I need not recite to you the many steps we took. You are as familiar with them as I am. In great part you are glad today, I am sure, that we took these steps.

In the restoration of purchasing power there is one element often overlooked by those who dwell in great industrial cities—the building up of the prices which farmers obtain for their farm products.

Notes Rise in Values.

A South compelled to sell its cotton for 5 cents a pound, a Middle West compelled to sell its corn for 10 or 15 cents a bushel, its hogs for 2 or 3 cents a pound, its wheat for 30 cents a bushel, could buy no automobiles made in Detroit. But a South with 10 or 12-cent cotton, a Middle West with 75-cent corn, 71-cent hogs and $1 wheat, can start and has started buying passenger cars, trucks and tractors.

In all other fields of production prices and values also rose—miners went back to work—Eastern facories opened their closed doors.

The dollars that we spent in relief, in work relief, in CCC camps, in drought relief, in cattle and hog buying and processing, each of them went to work. They were spent in the shops of the city and in the stores of the small towns and villages. They were spent again by the retailers who bought from wholesalers. They were spent again by wholesalers who bought from manufacturers and processors.

They were spent again in wages to those who worked and in purchases from those who produced the raw materials on the farms. And once again they were spent in the stores of the cities and the shops of the small-town villages. You know how many of these dollars have finally come to the city of Detroit in the purchase of automobiles.

Problems Still to Be Met.

All I need to repeat is the statement known to most of you here—that 1936 promises to be the second largest year of automobile production in our history—more than three and a half times as big as it was in 1932.

Detroit today is a very different city from what it was three years ago, and while the wheels of industry turn fast and unemployment is very greatly decreased, yet there are many problems not yet solved. I do not accept the conclusion of many Republican leaders that major depressions are inevitable in modern life.

It is not enough that we have ended the days in 1932 when workers in this city received for their labor as low as $5 or $6 for two weeks' work. It is not enough that we have saved many homes and put thousands of people to work. I believe that it is the duty of Government to bend every effort to prevent another major catastrophe such as that which hit this country as a result of the Republican leadership which ran the Government from 1921 to 1933.

There are a thousand and one things still to be done. It has been suggested that the Government's agricultural program is a "hit or miss" affair not worthy of support because, like an automobile, a new model is brought out every year. I have been glad to accept that simile. I have told the farmers of this country farming and farm policies, like automobile making, ought to improve each year—that model T farming may have been all right ten years ago but that we don't want model T farming or model T anything else in the year 1936.

Improvements Needed.

I have suggested that the automobile industry and every other industry still need great improvements in their relationship to their employes. And I will illustrate the point by a story: In the spring of 1934 there came to Washington representatives of the automobile workers—most of them young men without much experience in organized labor. One of them, a former Marine who had served through battle after battle in France, told me he was a machinist and that his pay was $1.25 an hour or $10 a day.

I told him I thought that was a pretty good wage scale and his reply was this: "Yes, Mr. President, it is a good hourly rate and a good daily rate, but last year I worked only 68 days." In other words, the total income of himself, his wife and his children was $680 for a year. On this yearly pay total he had lost the home on which he had paid down hundreds of dollars. He and his family were seeking to exist on $680 a year.

As a result of that meeting and of a subsequent meeting with company officials, I stressed the need of spreading the work more evenly through the year and of working toward raising the yearly pay envelope of Detroit and other automobile cities from six or seven hundred a year to over a thousand a year. Certain steps looking toward that end have been taken but they are not sufficient. It is my belief that the manufacturers of automobiles and the manufacturers of many other necessary commodities must, by planning, do far more than they have done to date to increase the yearly earnings of those who work for them.

Your Administration has that kind of objective in mind. It is my belief that the people of Detroit, like the people of the rest of the country, are going to ask on November 3d that the present type of Government continue rather than the type of Government which in its heart still believes in the policy of "laissez faire" and the kind of individualism which up to only three and a half years ago, frankly, put dollars above human rights.

When the smoke and dust of this political campaign clears away on the night of November 3d, history will record that the outstanding issue of the campaign was this—shall the social and economic security and betterment of the masses of the American people be maintained and strengthened or not? I am not afraid of the verdict. It will be yes.

G. O. P. Scores Roosevelt as 'U. S. Kerensky'

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—The Republican National Committee, in a statement issued today, said that President Roosevelt in his talk here last night proved "he is the Kerensky of the American revolutionary movements."

(Kerensky was a leader in the revolt of the Russians against the Czar after the World War, but after the revolutionists had won and the Soviet established he was relegated to obscurity.

"The poor lamb does not realize that his fantastic planned economy, his rapid extension of Government ownership, his idea that saving for a rainy day by business is wicked and must be presented by a confiscatory tax on surpluses leads directly to the destruction of the capitalistic system," the statement said.

"But (Earl) Browder, the Communist candidate for President, knows it and is supporting him. Rexford G. Tugwell knows it, and realizes that his own muzzling until after election is in the interest of the cause. Felix Frankfurter knows it and is keeping mighty quiet for the present. Mordecai Ezekiel knows it, and you haven't heard his name for months.

"Stalin, over in Russia, knows it and has ordered his following in the United States to back Roosevelt. • • •

"It is probable that Franklin D. Roosevelt really thinks he can save this system of free enterprise. It may be that he is sincere in the golden words of opportunity spoken to business here last night. But why are his words so different from his deeds?"

The statement asked whether the President intended to repeal or modify the tax on surpluses, what he proposed to do about the unemployed if he reduces spending, whether he planned to re-establish the NRA in some form or revive the power of the AAA and charged Mr. Roosevelt had ignored his Republican opponent's questions on these subjects.

"Everyone knows he cannot stop spending," the statement continued. "Farley's machine requires too much fuel. Tugwell and Ickes experiments cost too much. • • •"

In another statement, Republican National Chairman John D. M. Hamilton said of the parade preceding the President's address:

"Soldiers marched in line, a new custom for America, an old one with European dictators. Laboring men joined the procession, many because they were threatened with fines if they did not participate. Documentary evidence proves these threats were made."

Hamilton asked "what the millions of American workers and businessmen" were doing while, quoting the President, the Democratic Administration was pulling "the train of business and industry out of the ditch."

"Didn't they have any part in the partial upturn which still finds the United States thirteenth in recovery among the leading nations of the world as measured by industrial production?" asked Hamilton.

ica where we all may have work, holidays, shorter hours and Saturdays off and Sundays off as well."

Turning to the stadium as an example of work projects, the President said: "Some people have called it boondoggling to build stadia and parks, but if it's boondoggling then I'm a boondoggler and so are you."

Pleads for "Forgotten Man."

People by the tens of thousands were packed from buildings to curbs and pouring over at places into the streets along the long route from the stadium to the city hall.

At city hall, where more thousands stood behind straining police lines in Cadillac Square and far up the streets branching out from the hall, Mr. Roosevelt brought cheers immediately by asserting Frank Murphy, Democratic candidate for Governor of Michigan, has made a "splendid record" as United States high commissioner to the Philippine Islands and had been a "great" mayor of Detroit.

His Philippine record, Mr. Roosevelt said, "stands out as one of the most successful administrations in our history."

The President earlier today at Flint, Mich., asserted Republicans were "finding fault with everything that makes America the envy of the world in this good year 1936."

To several thousand cheering listeners, packed into a WPA-built stadium at Flint, the President said that "Republican spokesmen" were "taking counsel with despair" when they declared people were better off in other nations than in this country.

Just outside of Grand Rapids the Roosevelt Special passed so close to the "Sunflower Special" of Gov. Alf M. Landon that newsmen on the two trains waved to each other.

"Good Example" Cited.

From the same Campau square in Grand Rapids, where the Republican Presidential candidate had argued last night that the Administration had not produced real recovery, the Chief Executive contended that prosperity did not "just happen," that something "had to be done to bring prosperity back," and that the city with its furniture industry at the "highest peak since 1929" offered a "good example" of what had happened in the last four years.

In Lansing, Michigan's capital, the campaign special earlier in the day chugged to a stip while thousands of persons thundered a welcome beside the track. As Mr. Roosevelt stepped out onto the rear platform of the train, the throng stormed through police lines, broke restraining ropes and wedged solidly up to the sides of the rear five cars.

Small boys fought to get to the rear of the train, crawled underneath it and even clambered to the roof.

"My friends," Mr. Roosevelt started, then stopped a moment to watch the finale of what he described as a "kid fight."

The train had to be held several minutes while local officials exhorted the crowd to move back so there would be no injuries. Finally, the President had to "ask the children who are under the train up forward to please crawl out."

Names Three Recovery Steps.

By taking three steps, the Chief Executive argued at Grand Rapids, the Government has helped the city's furniture industry.

He listed these:

1. It stopped deflation.
2. It took "measures to enable people to improve their living conditions."
3. It saved homes, then encouraged people to build and improve homes.

He credited the Federal Housing Administration program with stimulating in the last two years $500,000,000 worth of home building and modernization.

At Pontiac, the President asserted he is firmly convinced the Nation has made a great gain in "interest in Government."

Calling upon the church to never again permit itself to become the tool of war-mad jingoists, the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, in Chicago, yesterday denounced with ringing vehemence the world's trend toward extreme nationalism and away from the spirit of Christ.

"An excess of nationalism coupled with the demand for more of economic advantage has brought the world to a condition bordering on chaos," he told the Pan-American Conference of Anglican Bishops gathered there.

"We may firmly resolve that never again shall the church lend itself to a propaganda that whipped the passions of men into a frenzy of zeal for a cause that has yet to be justified," the bishop of Washington said, and hotly attacked ministers who turned their churches into recruiting offices.

Citing an example of the "mistaken zeal" of the last war, he fearlessly quoted an address of one of his own clergymen, who during the last war had pleaded from his pulpit that 'the army today is the church in action, transforming the will of the church into deeds, expressing the moral judgments of the church in smashing blows.'

Learned at Awful Cost.

He then presented a five-point program, following which he cited as the duty of nations of the Western Hemisphere the avoidance of everything that would lead to war and establishment of conditions to show that nations can exist in peace and brotherhood.

"The church under pressure," Bishop Freeman said in commenting on the above quotation, "abdicated its exalted place as the exponent of the Prince of Peace. God helping, it will never again serve as a recruiting agency for the state. Possibly it has learned at awful cost the lesson of those tragic years.

"The hour has struck when our leadership is challenged, when we are solemnly called upon to a fresh and determined expression of loyalty to Him who dared to challenge and confront the rulers and despots who sought His destruction."

Saying that "the cynic argues that human nature, like Nature itself, is red in tooth and claw," he replied that such an argument "means the denial of the redemptive power of Christ, it is the glorifying of the man on horseback, booted and spurred . . .

"No tongue has the eloquence, no pen the cunning, to adequately set forth the dangers that threaten to uproot and destroy all that is dearest and most wholesome in life.

Is Wholesale Murder.

"The maintenance of world order and peace is the most vital and immediate concern of the church. War is the deadly enemy of the church; never more so than today.

"We of the Western Hemisphere have an obligation that is the weightier by reason of the ties that bind us together in an unbroken unity. The separation of church and state is not an implied divorce. Their interests are identical when the question of maintenance of peace is considered.

"Modern war is wholesale murder. Modern warfare brings its barbarous and diabolical instrumentalities to the very threshold of the church and home and lays its offending hand upon the innocent and defenseless. There are no battle lines. It is conditions such as these which make imperative a strong and persistent course of action on the church's leaders.

Asks Post Support.

"The youth of the world is demanding that our voice speak with no hesitant or uncertain sound. It is the voice of those who have in their generation witnessed the gross and shameless folly of a cataclysm. Youth has seen a war that was designed to end war made a witches' cauldron, to brew and disseminate more deadly germs that have infected men the world over. Our young people stand bewildered and confused. Shall they call to us in vain?

Concluding with a series of five proposals that the church stand resolutely for the Kellogg-Briand peace pact, that it try to suppress exaggerated nationalism, that it defend the underprivileged, that it encourage "right and equitable" relations between the nations of the world, and that it try to prevent "over-accented class consciousness," Bishop Freeman said "we dare not compromise our office, nor disclose in equivocal or uncertain terms our position.

Pretty mannequins will form two teams, the Landon and the Roosevelt teams. The volume of applause recorded will determine the captain of each team, who will represent Landon and Roosevelt in the final tabulation. They will then stand before the audience, bearing the respective colors of their candidates, and the winner will be selected.

At Pittsburgh, Pa., in the county morgue chapel, walled on two sides by bodies of unclaimed dead, motorists charged with drunken driving raise their right hands and swear they'll never drive again with liquor on their breaths. Coroner J. L. Davidson read oath prepared for them by Traffic Judge M. A. Musmanno, who sentenced the motorists to jail.

Pittsburgh Judge Leads 11 to Death House, Shows Accident Victims.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Oct. 15.—Eleven men, standing beside the bodies of the unclaimed dead in Allegheny County's Morgue, vowed on their honor not to drink again while driving an automobile.

They filed past the bodies of accident victims, stood beneath green lights of the morgue chapel, raised their right hands, and recited in solemn tones:

"I will never again drink any intoxicating beverage when I am about to drive an automobile."

All had been sentenced by Judge M. A. Musmanno to jail terms for driving while intoxicated.

He took them to the morgue yesterday, and administered the pledge after saying:

"This will sober you more than any imprisonment or words of mine. * * *

"As you stand in the midst of this scene of melancholy and tragedy, you will realize how lucky you are that you are not the author of any of those individual tragedies.

546 Is Death Toll In Islands Storm

Manila, Oct. 15 (AP).—Communication lines were restored in typhoon-harassed northern Luzon Island today and over the wires came tales of destruction that shot casualty lists up to 546 deaths and 1,045 missing.

The reports came from provinces that had been isolated since the storm whirled over the area north of here last Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

(Pan American Airways reports indicated another storm was brewing.)

Word from the Cabanatuan region said hungry mobs plodded through muck and debris-littered streets chanting prayers for relief. Asserted threats to loot rice warehouses caused army officials to send constabulary detachments to some areas. Relief agencies worked as fast as possible to get food supplies to the refugees.

Stalin Asserts Spain's Liberty Is World Issue

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Oct. 15.—Russia's dictator, Joseph Stalin, tonight broke his long silence on the Spanish civil war and declared the "freedom and liberation of that nation" is the concern of the whole world.

In his first public utterance of views on the Spanish situation, Stalin, as secretary general of the Communist Party, replied to greetings sent by the Spanish Communist Party to the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

"The laboring population of the Soviet Union," he said, "is fulfilling its duty and struggling for the population of Spain. It understands fully that the freedom and liberation of Spain is not a private cause for Spaniards, but a concern for the progressive humanity of the whole world."

His views, informed persons believed, gave further impetus to the growing demands of Russian workers that the Soviet take a hand to aid Spain materially, either through forcing a halt to alleged foreign aid to the insurgents or through opening the way for aid to the Spanish government.

The workers had demanded the Spanish government be given "everything necessary for it to carry on its struggle against Fascists * * * supported by Germany, Italy and Portugal."

Belgium Faithful to League.

London, Oct. 15 (A).—The Belgian ambassador told Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden his country would fulfill its League of Nations obligations, reliable sources said tonight.

The ambassador, Baron Cartier de Marchienne, was reported personally to have assured Eden, King Leopold's "neutrality" speech was concerned solely with Belgium participation in future conferences of signatories to the Locarno pact for collective European security.

With the Russian tension somewhat eased, hopes of British officials for the peace structure of Europe were bolstered by a noncommittal German reply to a questionnaire on future Locarno conferences.

Russia to Delay Action.

A Russian spokesman said his country is content to wait a while longer before pressing for reconvocation of the European nonintervention committee to act upon the Soviet demands for a French or British blockade of Portuguese ports to halt alleged violations of the Spanish neutrality pledge.

Lord Plymouth had turned down flatly the Russian demand for immediate reconvocation of the neutrality committee, but the unexpected speech of Belgium's King Leopold suddenly shifted the attention of both Britain and Russia to the future of the Locarno Pact and other military alliances in Europe.

Leopold's speech, urging virtually a Belgian return to her prewar neutrality status with no military assistance pacts, shocked British Locarno enthusiasts who wondered if it meant Belgium's withdrawal from the alliance.

Two More Plays Of Tournament Well Received

The second leg of the 1936 one-act play tournament of the Community Center Department was run last evening at the Theodore Roosevelt High School as the dramatic division of the Musical and Theatrical Guild of the Department of Agriculture and the Langley Lambs presented their entries before a responsive audience.

"Gilt Edge," the drama of criminal reformation by Agnes Emelie Peterson, was offered by the thespian Aggies, with Kenneth Gapen directing. Beatrice E. Sands carried the role of she who brought the would-be robber (played by Joseph Lima) back to rectitude. Others in the cast included Viola Randolph, J. R. Cavanagh, James E. Dille and Fred Fairchild.

The Langley Lambs presented "Fixins" by Paul Green, a drama of North Carolina tennant farmers cut from cloth not wholly unlike that from which his "The House of Connolly" was fashioned. Larry Lawrence was the narrow landminded farmer, with Guest Artist Elizabeth Gatlin Pritchard as the wife who sought a few of the world's niceties. Paul Taylor represented the land owner. M. Forney Reese directed.

Neither of the two plays, as well as the three of last Tuesday evening, could be said to be particularly notable in any respect.

Funeral services for John Ernest Dice, 60, veteran pressman of the Evening Star, will be held today at 2 p. m. at his late residence, 16 Rhode Island avenue. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Dice, who had been employed continually by the Star since 1902, died Wednesday night at his home after a short illness.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Mary V. Dice, and three sisters, Mrs. J. N. Paine, Mrs. May Wells and Miss Maud Dice.

Women Past 45

These symptoms at 45 are often due to a deficiency in the glandular system of a certain hormone (gland activator)—to relieve such headaches, hot flashes, dizzy spells and "nerves" coming on at 45, try 2 to 3 Zo-ak Tablets 3 times a day as directed on label. These harmless tablets contain the hormone and other helpful substances often prescribed by physicians to relieve the misery of the menopause (change of life) period. Zo-ak Tablets (orange package for women) are sold and recommended by Unity Drug Stores and all chains who will refund your money in full if you do not feel 100% better after taking Zo-ak as directed. 'White Rose' and 'Swollen Nose' Don't Make Sense, U. S. Argues

A song in which some of the rhyme was predicated on the words "white rose" and "swollen nose" was one of the exhibits produced by the Government in District Court yesterday in an effort to block an injunction suit brought by Henry R. Cohen, of Hollywood, Calif., to bar enforcement of a Postoffice Department fraud ordered against Universal Song Service, Inc.

Cohen, according to Assistant United States Attorney Henry A. Schweinhaut and W. C. O'Brien, an officer of the Postoffice, undertook to purchase rough poems written by clients. He then sought to shape them into song hits for a fee of $50.

The Government told Justice Oscar R. Luhring that Cohen had had 4,737 clients, but only a "score or more" had received royalties of as much as $12.50 and that the highest royalty paid was $22.50.

Cohen, seeking to combat the fraud order, said the Postoffice had acted arbitrarily and capriciously in barring the service from the mails. He said no complainants had appeared before the hearing. Following filing of the Cohen suit two week ago, the mail for the service has been impounded rather than returned to the senders.

To bolster their claim that the service was not entitled to the use of the mails, both Schweinhaut and O'Brien read song after song to Justice Luhring to demonstrate their alleged lack of worthiness. Justice Luhring took the case under advisement.

Durand Ouster Trial Recessed Until Tuesday

Dismissed Power Commission Employe Denies Inefficiency Charge.

Hearings on the dismissal of Robert Y. Durand from the Federal Power Commission were recessed yesterday until Tuesday following Durand's defense of himself against inefficiency—the reason advanced by the commission for his dismissal.

Details of Durand's alleged "inefficiency" were presented to the committee of labor experts hearing the case by Stanley W. Roland, Durand's immediate superior, who charged him with making numerous errors in the compilation of progress reports on the electric rate survey being made by the commission.

In defense, Durand and his counsel, John H. Finerty, tried to show that the compilation of the progress reports was only a minor and comparatively unimportant phase of Durand's work and that his major duty was keeping up to date a master file, which he had done efficiently.

Durand testified that getting up the progress reports was "a strictly mechanical job" of counting and it was "easy to miss up on one or two reports," but that keeping the file was "less mechanical" and more difficult to make errors with.

Durand also said that during the period when he was accused of making the errors in the progress reports he was "under considerable pressure" and had to work overtime. He cited as sample totals of the overtime hours put in, 18 hours in October, 1934; 43½ in November and 23½ in December of the same year.

The charge made by Finerty at the opening session of the hearing that the Power Commission had forbidden the circulation of literature regarding union matters, but did not prohibit other forms of handbills, was brought up a second time yesterday in the testimony of David Durand, a cousin of the dismissed employe and a former commission worker.

David Durand testified that he spent a number of afternoons collecting tennis court fees from employes participating in a tennis tournament, and that the bulletin boards in the commission's offices frequently contained bowling league and baseball team scores.

When the hearing is resumed next week, Robert Durand is to take the stand to be cross-examined by the commission's attorneys.

Woman Struck By Police Auto Oct. 11 Is Dead

Mrs. Quay Is 68th Traffic Victim; Driver Tagged 54 Times Warned.

The District's sixty-eighth traffic fatality for 1936 was recorded last night when Mrs. Anna Quay, 65, of 5502 Thirteenth street northwest, died at her home of injuries suffered when she was struck by a police scout car, October 11.

At the time of the accident, witnesses said the victim apparently walked into the side of the car, which was driven by Private Jesse Hastie, of the Sixth Precinct. With him rode Patrolman C. S. Price.

Mrs. Quay was taken to Walter Reed Hospital. Later she returned home.

Two Hurt in Traffic.

Samuel E. Carpenter, 37, of Silver Spring, Md., suffered head cuts and bruises early yesterday when the automobile he was driving collided with a parked car in the 7700 block Sixteenth street northwest. He was treated at Walter Reed Hospital.

Charles M. Hallman, colored, 5, of 617 M street northwest, was treated at Children's Hospital for a broken right leg and lacerations to his head after he was knocked down while playing in front of his home. Police did not hold the driver of the car.

Ned Alfred Bord, local real estate man, was cited before the Board of Revocation and Review of Operators' Permits yesterday to explain a total of 54 parking charges during the past several years.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Stanley DeNeale warned Bord that District officials would not tolerate such a record and told him that an additional charge would mean suspension of his driving permit.

Bord admitted receiving "a number" of tickets for illegal parking along downtown Connecticut avenue. He estimated he had paid approximately $200 for his offenses since 1931. Attorney William H. Lichtenberg, who represented Bord, assured the revocation board his client would use a parking lot in the future.

2 Permits Revoked.

Fifteen-day suspensions—John W. Doldt, Dorsey, Md., 40 miles; Benjamin H. Henderson, McLean, Va., 38 miles; James D. Hundon, Marrisville, Va., 40 miles; Fritz Link, Baltimore, Md., 40 miles; Dorothy R. Matter, Silver Springs, Md., 38 miles; Michael Rocky, Alexandria, Va., 40 miles; Tascoe T. Robinson, McLean, Va., 40 miles; Roy Schneiter, Silver Spring, Md., 38 miles; Howard A. Tinkle, Alexandria, Va., 36 miles.

D. C. Red Cross Seeks to Reach Its Goal Today

12,000 Short in Campaign, Workers Will Spur Their Efforts.

With the total Red Cross enrollment last night placed at 53,954—12,000 short of the goal—campaign leaders and the 7,000 solicitors who make up the roll call organization prepared to start the final push this morning, determined to go over the top by midnight.

From the roll call chairman down through division leaders, key men and solicitors, the word has gone out that today is the big day, and that every possible effort must be made to complete canvassing and report to campaign headquarters, 1416 H street northwest, as soon as possible.

Lloyd B. Wilson, chairman of the drive, called on every member of his committee to see that reports of solicitation are submitted today, regardless of whether the canvassing is complete.

Even though the 12,000 is twice the highest daily enrollment yet reported, officials said that with every member "plugging," the quota will be reached.

The financial committee, of which Robert V. Fleming is chairman, now has reported a total of 2,712 members, more than 700 over the unit's goal. This group was the first to top its quota, and Fleming yesterday expressed the belief the total figure would be much higher.

Chile's Riders Here Day Early But Get Welcome, Anyway

Chilean riders in the Inter-American horse show next week arrived in Washington a day ahead of time yesterday, and were received with fanfare and handshakes at Union Station by the Army Band and several dignitaries.

Originally scheduled to come here this afternoon they, at the last minute, decided to come yesterday, causing some frantic switching in plans by Army officers, the Mexican team, the Army Band, Ambassador Don Manuel Trucco and Commissioner Hazen, but all went off smoothly, with smiles distributed wholesale.

Three of the green uniformed young cavalrymen, all dark and handsome, were married ahead of time, too, it was learned as they detrained with their youthful wives. They had expected to be married later this month, but when they were unexpectedly notified of their appointment to the riding team, they all marched to the altar so as to make a honeymoon of the trip north, which may occasion some disappointment among Washington debs.

The international contest begins Thursday, Chile has three new riders here this time, Capt. Eduardo Yanez being the only one of last year's champions to return.

U. S. Aids Clear Police Officer In CCC Death

District Attorney Refuses to Prosecute Landrum for Fatal Shooting.

Basing his opinion on the reports of three of his assistants, United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett yesterday declined to present to the grand jury the facts involved in the slaying of Lawrence Basey, 27-year-old colored Civilian Conservation Corps worker, by Policeman V. H. Landrum.

Col. Garnett listened to a presentation of the facts concerning the shooting prepared by the interracial committee of the District of Columbia. A group of members of the committee, headed by Charles Edward Russell, presented the demand to the district attorney after some of the committee members had conducted an investigation into the slaying.

Two inquests into Basey's death were held by the coroner's jury. The first jury was "hung" and a second jury exonerated the policeman with the statement that he had shot in self-defense. It was brought out he had arrested five colored men at Nineteenth and M streets northwest, and that he feared he was about to be attacked.

Allen J. Krouse, Howard Boyd and Charles Murray, all assistant United States attorneys, investigated the case and were unanimous in their opinion that no action against the policeman was warranted. All three made their studies independently.

Russell intimated he would place his committee's facts before the District Crime Commission for that body's information.

Welfare Expert Discusses Issues

The first of a series of lectures, under the sponsorship of the Committee on Volunteer Service of the Washington Council of Social Agencies, was presented yesterday at the United States Chamber of Commerce by Eduard C. Lindeman, of the New York School of Social Work.

Lindeman dealt with the reasons for poor living conditions in the nation's larger cities as compared with those of 20 years ago.

"Complexity is never in a situation, but in the mind attempting to deal with the situation," said Lindeman.

A. F. L. Report On Candidates Awaited Today

By Felix Belair.

A "non-partisan" report on labor records of candidates for President which will give members of labor unions an understanding "whom they should vote for" is expected to be issued by the American Federation of Labor today.

With the labor movement more deeply engrossed in politics than at any time in the past, the report is being given an unusual amount of consideration.

While the statement is expected to be in the form of a mere recital of the record of each of the candidates in relation to labor problems, William Green, federation president, is authority for the statement that "no doubt workers will understand from the report whom they should vote for."

Green has declared personally that he is for President Roosevelt. In this, he voices the sentiment of a large majority of the executive council of the federation now in session. Nevertheless, there is an active minority, led by William L. Hutcheson, president of the Carpenters' Union, which is supporting Gov. Alf M. Landon. Hutcheson is in charge of labor activities for the Republican National Committee.

Denies Report Is Delayed.

Green yesterday flatly denied Hutcheson had insisted on delaying issuance of the report because it is expected to be favorable to the President or for any other reason. He denied the report is being delayed.

As labor leaders were going over the contents of the report, the Republican committee issued a pamphlet insisting Green in his speech before the convention of the American Legion had repudiated the President. Green in his speech had attacked Communists and radicals. The committee held this to be a repudiation of many of the President's followers and of some Administration officials, including Undersecretary Rexford G. Tugwell.

Green replied to the Republican charges by saying that he stood on his speech to the legion and that "further affiant sayeth not."

The federation has been traditionally nonpartisan, although its officers have expressed themselves freely. The situation this year, however, has been confused by the outright support given the President, with money and otherwise, by the Committee for Industrial Organization, which includes the ten unions suspended from the federation. It also is confused by the personal enmity between John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., and Hutcheson, an enmity climaxed by a fistic encounter at the last federation convention.

Deadlock Unbroken.

The quarrel between the federation and the C. I. O. continued to be deadlocked yesterday with a special committee appointed by the executive council still waiting vainly to confer with representatives of the C. I. O.

Green announced that labor differences with hotels at Tampa, Fla., had been settled and that the federation convention definitely will open in that city November 16. A sub-committee of the council conferred all day with representatives of publishers and workers in connection with the American Newspaper Guild strike against the Seattle Post-Intelligencer. Green still expressed hope the strike could be settled.

Wrists Slashed, Miss Ring, Writer, Found Dead Here

The career of Priscilla Ring, Associated Press correspondent in Istanbul, Turkey, when much of the history of the past decade was being written, ended in death at St. Elizabeths Hospital late yesterday.

Miss Ring, who had been a patient at the institution for more than a year, was found dead in her room, an apparent suicide. Her wrists were slashed by jagged glass, a bit of which was still clutched in her hand. The window was shattered.

A daughter of the late Commodore James Ring, U. S. N., Miss Ring, who was 38, was graduated from Radcliffe College and became a teacher. In 1922 she joined her sister, Miss Martha Ring, in Istanbul, which then was Constantinople. She was attached to the faculty of the American University there. In 1925 she became correspondent for the Associated Press.

In 1932 she hastened to Greece to cover the flight of Samuel Insull. She followed him into the Port of Turkey. But at the end of her assignment her health failed, and she was forced to return to the United States.

Art by High School Students Shown at National Museum

Five Washingtonians Are Represented in Ninth Annual Showing; More Than 350 Items Will Be Displayed.

The National Museum yesterday offered ample proof that high school students do something more than attend football games, devour bananas splits and roll their socks.

The Ninth Annual Scholastic High School Arts and Crafts Exhibition opened at 9 a. m. and will continue the remainder of this month. It demonstrated pretty conclusively that American boys and girls in their teens can produce oil paintings, sculpture, water colors, drawings, sketches, designs and pottery that ask for no apologies.

Scholastic Magazine and the American Federation of Arts are co-sponsors of the traveling art show. It opened in the Carnegie Museum, Pittsburgh, last spring. Next stops were the Chicago Art Institute, a Philadelphia department store and now Washington.

Washingtonians in List.

The interesting water-color study of a colored laborer, painted by 15-year-old Peter de Anna, of Central High School, was hung yesterday. Harold H. Geise, 17, and Donald Hall Robertson, 17, also of Central, and Eddie Chase, 18, and Alan Moran, 17, of Roosevelt, are the other local students in the show. Young de Anna's picture won fourth prize in the pictorial arts division.

Visitors may expect to see the conventional and the unconventional, sensitive portraits and virile outdoor scenes. At least one nude —though it is modified—was observed while the last exhibits were being installed.

Busily engaged at the museum was Maurice K. Robinson, editor of Scholastic, the magazine over which a furor was raised several months ago when Representative Thomas L. Blanton (Democrat), of Texas, charged it had communistic leanings.

Foreign Countries.

Not only does the collection represent high school student bodies of nearly every section of this country, but there is also a separate alcove devoted to art work by Belgian, Canadian, German, Russian, Austrian, French and Danish boys and girls. These were submitted through co-operation of the ministers of education of the respective countries.

Although this is the ninth annual exhibition, only once before has it come to the Capital. That was last year. Closing here November 1, its next station will be the American Museum of Natural History, opening there November 14.

The 350 to 400 items in the Washington show are the cream of a crop of 10,000 pieces which poured into Pittsburgh last spring to be judged in the annual high school art competition. Prize winners and runners-up were rewarded with cash and scholarships valued at $10,000.

It was in 1934 that publishers of Scholastic Magazine paved way for the annual competition by preparing a special issue written and illustrated entirely by high school students. A prize was offered for the best cover design. The plan worked out so successfully it was broadened to such a degree that by the spring of 1928 the first national art exhibition was being held in Pittsburgh.

Perhaps the exhibit which will incubate more puzzlement than any other is the first prize in sculpture. It might be entitled "Lady Begging Forgiveness," "The Spirit of Melancholy," "Nude in Macy's Window," "Exuberant Widow," or almost anything that strikes the fancy. The creator, though, simply calls it an abstract figure. He is Peter John Lupori, 17, of Dormont (Pa.) High School.

Home Buyers Urged To Study Restrictions

"Don't buy a home until you have thoroughly investigated the city regulations pertaining to the neighborhood in which it is located," advised Col. Daniel I. Sultan, District engineering commissioner, in an address at the Junior Board of Commerce at the Lee House yesterday.

Col. Sutan added that most Washingtonians seemed oblivous "to the fact that many sections of the city, which apparently are first class residential areas, are zoned to permit the erection of flats and small apartments."

Pallbearers Are Listed For Lieut. Griffith Rites

Pallbearers for Lieut. Russell Hunter Griffith, for whom funeral services will be held at Fort Myer Chapel at 1 p. m. today, were announced yesterday by the War Department. They are Capt. Eugene H. Beede and Lieuts. John C. Gordon, Ernest F. Easterbrook, Daniel F. Callahan, jr., Richard H. Wise and Filbert F. Hunter.

Lieut. Griffith, an Army Air Corps pilot, was killed in a crash Monday near Grand Prairie, Tex. The Rev. H. H. Stewrett, of All Souls' Memorial Church, will officiate at the services. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

U. S. to Demand Suspect's Trial In Bomb Death

Trial for sending an explosive through the mails awaits Ed Banner, held as an accomplice in the bomb-slaying of Curry Thomas at Eastville, Va., it was indicated by postal authorities here yesterday.

Banner, arrested with Dr. H. R. Hege, dentist, who committed suicide in the Eastville jail Sunday, faces the Federal charge although he probably will be released soon on the State's murder charge.

T. M. Milligan, Postoffice inspector supervising the Virginia district, has been informed Commonwealth's Attorney Charles Lankford does not believe he has sufficient evidence to take Banner to court for murder.

"I wouldn't be surprised if Banner is tried in the Federal courts on the bomb-mailing charge," said Milligan yesterday. "If the State of Virginia does not want to prosecute him, then I think Sterling Hutcheson, United States district attorney in Richmond, will try him. We have a lot of evidence on the mailing charge."

On the expectation that Banner will be brought before a Federal court, the story of the solution of the unusual case is being withheld, even though the principal man accused, Dr. Hege, is dead, by his own hand. While in his cell, Dr. Hege slashed arteries in his throat and wrist with a fragment of glass from his broken spectacles.

It has been learned Banner, a roomer in Dr. Hege's home at Mount Airy, N. C., will be accused of being present in Richmond when the fatal missile was mailed to Thomas and his bride last July. It will be charged he knew what was in the death package when it was mailed and that he, therefore, was an accessory to the crime.

Banner was still in jail at Eastville last night, at request of postal inspectors who hastened to the town upon receiving news Dr. Hege had killed himself.

The offense of being an accessory to the crime of mailing an explosive through the mails calls for a possible 20-year jail sentence and $10,000 fine.

"Perhaps Mr. Lankford is willing to free Banner on the murder charges," said Milligan, "but the Postoffice Department is not yet satisfied. There are two entirely different crimes involved, and we are only awaiting the advice of District Attorney Hutcheson before proceeding."

Curry Thomas, a wealthy Cape Charles farmer, early last summer married a former nurse in Dr. Hege's dental office. On July 22 they received a "wedding gift"—a bomb which killed Thomas and seriously injured his bride. Postal inspectors accused Hege and Banner of the "murder by mail." Banner is a former WPA foreman in Mount Airy, N. C.

Beware The Cough

From a common cold That Hangs On

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Creomulsion not only contains the soothing elements common to many remedies; such as, Syrup of White Pine Compound with Tar, fluid extract of Licorice Root, fluid extract of Wild Cherry and Menthol, but also has fluid extract of Ipecac for its powerful phlegm loosening effect, fluid extract of Cascara for its mild laxative effect and, most important of all, Beechwood Creosote is perfectly blended with all of these to reach the source of the trouble from the inside. Creomulsion can be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children with remarkable results.

Thousands of doctors use Creomulsion in their own families as well as in their practice knowing how Creomulsion aids nature to soothe the inflamed membranes and heal the irritated tissues as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled. Druggists also know the effectiveness of Beechwood Creosote and they rank Creomulsion top for coughs because you get a real dose of Creosote in Creomulsion, emulsified so that it is palatable, digestible and potent for going to the very seat of the trouble.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations and especially those stubborn ones that start with a common cold and hang on for dreadful days and nights thereafter. Even if other remedies have failed, your druggist is authorized to guarantee Creomulsion and to refund every cent of your money if you are not satisfied with results from the very first bottle. Don't worry through another sleepless night—phone or go get a bottle of Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

It's our family's whiskey, neighbor—and neighbor, it's your price!

That's me with the basket shaking hands with Burkes and telling him how real fine I think he's got his window fixed up. Burkes told me he likes it fine too, because just as quick as folks took note of how his store was handling our Family's Whiskey, his business started picking right up. According to what he says, he's got a pretty steady string of Wilken Family customers by now. That's my brother-in-law Tom carrying his coat and my brother William Wilken holding the bag. And our dog Jessie Wilken looking up and whining at me. Smelling the meat in the basket most probably.
Harry E. Wilken

It's sure nice seeing our personal Family's Whiskey all over the place!

I want to tell you it does my heart good—hearing store keepers like Burkes bragging about how their business is humming right along now, since folks are getting what they like in whiskey. I know we never meet up with any people hereabouts but what they're just as pleased as can be over getting the Wilken Family's own personal recipe.

You see—being a family of distillers since way back in the early days—this here Family's Whiskey of ours is just about our whole life. And all we're thinking about or caring about is keeping every batch we put out just so. There's nothing makes us Wilkens quite so happy as hearing folks say how they never really did know how mild and tasty a whiskey could be until they came to taste the Wilken Family Whiskey.

Well, I figure it's more than likely the three generations of us Wilkens have put more time into whiskey making than any other family anywheres. And this being our family's own personal recipe—I kind of suppose it just ought to be about the tastiest of them all!

Theater Guild Signs New Star In LeGallienne

The Theater Guild announces that Eva Le Gallienne will play a leading role in "Prelude to Exile" the William J. McNally play, based on the life of Richard Wagner, the composer, which will be that organization's second production of the season.

The signing of Miss Le Gallienne for "Prelude to Exile" marks the first time in ten years that she will have appeared in a play under any other management than her own.

It will be ten years this month, on October 25, 1926, to be exact, that Miss Le Gallienne founded her own Civic Repertory Theater in Fourteenth Street.

During the intervening years she has carved a memorable niche for herself in the theater. She presented and appeared in a long and impressive list of productions that included "The Cherry Orchard," "Twelfth Night," "Peter Pan," "The Sea Gull," "Romeo and Juliet," "Siegfried," "Alison's House," "Alice in Wonderland" and "Camille."

Two years ago she dissolved the Civic Repertory Theater and then came uptown to appear in three productions, "L'Aiglon," "Hedda Gabler" and "The Cradle Song." These productions, too, like every one of her plays since 1926, were presented under her management.

The Theater Guild, however, is not exactly a new maangement to Miss Le Gallienne. In 1921 she appeared in the role of Julie in Ferenc Molnar's "Liliom" and scored a great personal triumph in one of the Guild's most successful productions. She revived and appeared in this play in her Civic Repertory Theater

Jimmie Fidler In Hollywood

Hollywood, Oct. 16.

Idle chatter: Wallace Beery's hair, which looks coarse, is fine as cornsilk. Daughters named before birth (their parents wanted sons): Ottolie Krueger. No matter what she is doing, Loretta Young never misses Sunday morning mass. Lawrence Tibbett foams when printers pluralize his surname (so be careful, boys). The slight upward tilt to corners of Evelyn Venable's eyes gives them a feline appearance. Joan Bennett's face (not too pretty off-screen) is photographically perfect. Candidate for dimplest knees: Arline Judge.

Wallace Beery.

I wonder if comment has been published on long-skirted evening gowns as a godsend to movie extras? They are indeed! No work is more foot-tiring than playing dress-extras; it means standing on sets from eight to ten hours at a stretch. When knee-length skirts were vogue, extra girls had to wear smart, tight-fitting slippers, and at the end of a long day their feet ached like angry nerves. Today, their feet hidden by long skirts, the ladies wear sandals, house slippers, low-heel shoes, and I have even run across a few (in backgrounds) whose tootsies were in the nude, tch, tch!

A woman acquaintance dwelling in Santa Monica brought me this odd story. She takes long walks through the canyons, and on several occasions she was moved to pity at sight of a woman clad in a worn, shabby coat, who also took morning strolls. One day my friend flung a last season's coat over her arm, and when she spied the other woman, walked rapidly forward to offer the garment. But when she was close enough for recognition, my friend practically fainted with embarrassment. The woman to whom she had almost offered charity was Greta Garbo.

"CATHERINE THE GREAT." Alexander Korda's picturization for United Artists' release of a story by Lajos Biro. Arthur Wimperis and Melchior Lengyel, starring Elisabeth Bergner, with Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Flora Robson, Sir Gerald du Maurier, Irene Vanbrugh, Diana Napier, Dorothy Hale, Griffith Jones, Clifford Heatherley and Lawrence Hanray. Directed by Paul Czinner. A revival.

In reviving Alexander Korda's production of "Catherine the Great," which served to introduce the remarkable histrionic endowments of Elisabeth Bergner to American audiences, back in 1934, the Little Theater has resurrected by far the most impressive of the recent screen stories based on the life of the imperious empress of a remote Russia.

The tiny and wide-eyed Miss Bergner possesses an enormous power of personality which she seems able to project with equal effectiveness either across the footlights or from the silver sheet.

In "Catherine the Great," she appears first as a timid and abashed young woman whose troth already is plighted to the egocentric who rules over a vast domain. The crux of the play rests in the manner in which the fragile bride gradually assumes the reigns of government and escapes from the obnoxious perversions of a sovereign madman.

Nelson B. Bell

About the Showshops

THERE is promise of another distinguished evening in the theater with the coming of Arthur Hopkins' production of "Plumes in the Dust" to the National Theater the week of Monday, October 26.

It is to David Wallace, an old friend among the better stentors of the drama, that I am indebted for the information that this play, based on the life of Edgar Allan Poe, represents an especially fine piece of dramatic literature.

BELL.

I am told that Sophie Treadwell, the author, has emblazoned the concentrated results of several years of research with a literary grace and a dramatic soundness that augur something comparable to the authentic artistry of "St. Helena."

From what Mr. Wallace tells me, it is not surprising that this should have been the biographical play to lure Mr. Hopkins back to the active battlefronts of the playhouse.

With Henry Hull in the leading role, and a cast of noteworthy artists in support, it seems reasonable to expect something a little out of the ordinary the night of the 26th.

* * *

A welcome caller yesterday afternoon was Clifford Brooke, former director of the National Theater Players, now appearing with Ina Claire and Osgood Perkins in "End of Summer," at the National. Looking "in the pink," as we say around the better training camps, "Brookie," as he is affectionately known by a host of local friends, seemed a little chagrined that he should have "blown up" in his first sustained speech on Monday night.

"I didn't expect to be remembered," said he, "and when I received that overwhelming reception from those out front on my first entrance I was so flabbergasted that lines left me like autumn leaves falling off a tree."

Later in the season, Mr. Brooke will direct a play for the Theater Guild, the present acting assignment being somewhat in the nature of a stop-gap until the other job is ready. It was good to renew a friendly acquaintanceship with this veteran of the theater, who is equally capable as actor, stage director and motion picture director. Brookie is a pretty nice guy.

It it is not treading on Mr. Heiney's toes, there will be a "stunt broadcast" that will take the radio audience backstage in the new Civic Theater's workshop on Saturday night from 8 to 8:30, over Station WJSV.

The play in preparation as its first offering by the Civic Theater is Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra." It will be with the workshop activities centering in this enterprise that the broadcast will concern itself. The loudspeakers should disgorge the commotions of hammers hammering, paint brushes swishing, costumers fretting and artisans worrying about "props." Eventually, the business will get around to Day Tuttle, director, and the members of the cast, who will have interesting things to say—one hopes—concerning this pretentious undertaking by a new organization whose purposes are as worthy as they are serious and deep-rooted.

Speaking of the Civic Theater brings to mind that the Studio of Theater Arts, under the directorship of Constance Connor Brown, has affiliated itself with the new theater laboratory group as a training ground for aspirants to all branches of theatrical activity. The studio offers a six months' course that covers acting, speech and voice, eurythmics and stagecraft. A class in direction will be added this season.

Tryouts for the limited number of scholarships that Miss Brown offers annually will be held Sunday afternoon, October 18, and Monday evening, Octobeer 19, it is announced. These will be conducted in the studio headquarters at 1731 K street and are open to everyone interested in any ramification of the far-flung and slightly bewildering pursuits of Thespianism. The Sunday afternoon readings will begin at 3 o'clock; Monday evening's at 7. Classes are scheduled to start on Thursday, October 22. There it is, come and get it.

Twelve voices, six male and six female, again are being sought by Gene Ford, manager of Loew's Capitol Theater. Candidates are requested to report to Mr. Ford at the Capitol stage door at 7:30 Sunday night.

The vocalists selected at this Sunday audition will be engaged for participation in a lavish overture production, called "The Rise and Fall of Dinah," to be presented as one of the highlights of the bill being arranged for the week of Friday, October 23.

"The Rise and Fall of Dinah," if you are still listening, is a novel undertaking, which will trace in original fashion the birth of that popular tune of "Dinah," its rise to great favor and its subsequent decline. Mr. Lampkin is at the bottom of the whole merry business, as goes without saying. The singers chosen will be given a full week's engagement.

Frank "Bring-'Em-Back-Alive" Buck made a hurried visit to the Capital yesterday to confer with officials of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry regarding restrictions imposed upon the importation of certain wild animals into the United States. Interviewed at the Mayflower, Buck declared that the business of snaring lions, tigers and other beasts of the veldts and jungles never has been better. During his brief stay in Washington, the intrepid animal man also found time to visit Hecht's and personally autograph copies of his several books on wild game hunting. Buck will make a new motion picture shortly after the first of the year.

Carol F. Winchester, formerly on the managerial staff of the Fox, now Loew's Capitol Theater, is going back into the picture business again after several years devoted to other activities. Beginning about the middle of November, he will have complete charge of the Wilson Theater, Colonial Village, Wilson Boulevard, Arlington, Va.

The house will pursue a first-run policy and will have a seating capacity of 700. Every modern appointment will be provided to add to the comfort and pleasure of the cash customers. The Wilson will be operated as a new link in the chain of picture houses operated by Neighborhood Theaters, Inc.

Another Meteorological Note.

Yesterday's last line might have been otherwise put. Since all thought of summer vacations have vanished and winter is supposed to be upon us, why not something like "So this is the Indian Summer of our discontent?"

The Post's New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons.

Donohue Is Warned.

TRAGEDY: Practically all of the shows now running on Broadway did a turnaway business at their Columbus Day matinees . . . The Zeigfeld Follies, however, was dark that afternoon. Lee Shubert, the producer, entered the theater and found no customers, no cast, no anything. He asked about the ticket-sale for the matinee show—and was told that there had been no sale. In fact, the tickets hadn't even been printed . . . The officials had completely forgotten—that Monday was a holiday!

CHANCE: They're telling this in gambling circles . . . of two "proposition" Canfields who plotted to reap a harvest from their colleagues. The plotters cornered a waiter in the restaurant they all frequent—a waiter whose dumbness was the laughing-stock of the entire group. For three days they rehearsed him in the proper spelling of only two words—"Mississippi" and "anthropology" . . . When at last he could spell these words, the gamblers began their operations. That night they joined the group at the restaurant and listened to the usual jibes hurled at the dumb waiter. "Well," said the first, "I'll bet he can spell any big word you name" . . . The bets were made, and the second conspirator directed: "Spell Mississippi" . . . The waiter grinned, grabbed pencil and paper—and spelled out perfectly "a-n-t-h-r-o-p-o-l-o-g-y."

TURMOIL: Monday's newspapers carried photos of Jimmy Donohue and Ruth Etting arriving on the Normandie. They posed smiling at each other, exhibiting that they're the best of friends. Here's what really happened: Sunday afternoon young Jimmy spoke to his family in New York via ship-to-shore phone. "Listen, you," he was instructed, "don't dare step foot off that boat without posing for a friendly picture with Ruth Etting. We don't care for the type of publicity you've been getting. Pose that way—or you'll get hell!"

RELIEF: Lou Holtz, somehow, is managing to remain in the Donohue-Ferry show. "Transatlantic Rhythm," whose disturbances have caused international repercussions . . . For two weeks before the opening Lou fought with the others for his pay and listened to the constant wranglings. When the blow-off came at the London opening, Lou told the management: "Well, after such two weeks, I'm entitled to a little rest. I'm taking my vacatoin now." . . . "Really?" asked the amazed producer. "Where will you go to take that rest?" . . . Lou answered: "Spain"

ACCIDENT: Irving Zussman, a Broadway press agent, was one of those hurt the other night when two people fell out of the Strand Theater balcony . . . One of these fell upon Zussman, whose arms were fractured and who fainted immediately. Still unconscious, he was removed to a hospital, where some anxious friends grouped around the doctor who was attending him . . . "How is he, doc?" one of them asked . . . Just then Zussman moved, and whispered words which the doctor alone could hear. The interne heard, nodded to the friends and assured: "He's all right now" . . . The words whispered were "I wanna see my lawyer!"

Bus Line Hearing Set.

The Interstate Commerce Commission announced yesterday the petition of the Richmond Greyhound Lines, Inc., for acquisition of the Peninsula Transit Corporation would be heard by a joint board for Maryland and Virginia at Norfolk, Va., October 30, the Associated Press reported.

Miss Temple Chants a Roundelay

When Shirley Temple appears on the screen in "Dimples," which, one suspects, is the picture that originally was called "The Bowery Princess," she will be heard in six rousing song numbers, the general nature of one of which may be guessed from the likeness of the tiny star reproduced above. By a sudden decision of the high command, "Dimples" opens at Loew's Palace Theater today, a full week ahead of its first booking, succeeding "Dodsworth."

Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Ely Culbertson says.

A Bad Signal.

It takes a pretty good bridge player to become aware of the fact that it is possible to signal during the play of the cards. It took generations of whist players to develop the ingenious idea that an unnecessarily high card indicated a desired lead, whereas a low card meant that the lead was not desired.

But care must be taken that the high card used as a signal is not needed more urgently for some other purpose. Sometimes it is better to risk leaving your partner in the dark.

	♠ A J 8 4 ♡ J 6 2 ◇ A Q J ♣ A 9 6
♠ Q 7 3 ♡ 8 5 3 ◇ 10 7 5 4 ♣ K 10 5	North West East South	♠ K 9 5 ♡ A 7 ◇ 9 3 2 ♣ J 7 4 3 2
	♠ 10 6 2 ♡ K Q 10 9 4 ◇ K 8 6 ♣ Q 8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 N T	Pass	3 ♡ (1)	Pass
3 ♠ (2)	Pass	4 ♡ (3)	Pass
Pass	Pass

(1) With only two honor-tricks and a balanced hand, a better bid would have been two notrump.

(2) North properly shows a biddable spade suit in response to his partner's forcing takeout.

(3) Three notrump might have been a better choice. Only a club opening lead could defeat it.

West opened the fourth best diamond and dummy won with the jack. A small heart was led and East won immediately with the ace and returned a trump.

Declarer won with the king of hearts and drew the last trump. At this point East foolishly discarded the nine of spades in an attempt to tell his partner that he wanted a spade lead.

Up to this point declarer had not been sure how he was going to play the hand. His best chance had seemed to be a lead toward the queen of clubs in the hope that East had the king.

But the discard of the nine of spades gave South another opportunity to make the hand. He led the ten of spades. West and dummy ducked, and East won with the king. East hastily returned a club, but it was too late. South had time to get back to his own hand with the king of diamonds and take another spade finesse. But even had a club trick been taken by the defenders, the loss of a spade trick would still have been fatal.

Had East retained the nine of spades, declarer could not have established spades without losing two tricks in the suit. By that time a club trick could have been set up and cashed.

Gun Factory's 50 Years Bow To Lee's Record

Chief Clerk Went to Work in Navy Yard at 15 Back in 1884.

By Gerald G. Gross.

Fifty-two years in the same job, Jesse B. K. Lee reckons the position is permanent.

The Naval Gun Factory, main unit of the Washington Navy Yard, is celebrating its golden anniversary this month, but at that it is two years' younger than the service record of Lee, who happens to be the factory's chief clerk.

It doesn't seem that long to him, however. The years pass swiftly and to Lee it hardly seems credible that Chester A. Arthur was in the White House, Washington Monument was just dedicated and Franklin D. Roosevelt was in swaddling clothes when he came to the Navy Yard as a 15-year-old boy in August, 1884.

Seated yesterday at his desk, signing papers and giving orders to messengers, Lee scarcely looked the part of the "yard's" oldest employe in point of service. He is youthful of outlook, the physical equal of one 15 years his junior and, withal, liberally stocked with jolly reminiscences.

"I was a schoolboy," he said, "when Joseph Brummett, who was then chief clerk of the yard and a friend of the family's, came to our house one day and offered me a job as typist. We lived at 1507 H street, where the Shoreham Building now stands.

"Well, I was making from $75 to $100 a month collecting and selling postage stamps, so I didn't look with any particular favor upon a $1-a-day job as a Navy Yard 'boy.' That would be my rank—boy.

"But Mr. Brummett was pretty insistent and so I accepted, figuring I'd stay only until school took up again in the fall. And I'm still here."

When classes were resumed a few weeks later, Brummett slyly raised the neophyte's pay to $1.25 a day. It worked. Lee did not enroll for the new term. Incidentally, his best chum at Franklin School, now used as offices for the Board of Education and the administrative staff, was Billy Howe, son of Admiral J. A. Howe, who perfected the naval torpedo.

"Misgivings" Fade Away.

When, a few months later, his daily wage was elevated to the magnificent sum of $1.50, any and all misgivings Lee might have had about his decision to stick by the Navy were wiped away.

About the time the naval gun factory was formally established by order of Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney, Lee graduated into the $2 class.

Capt. A. H. McCormick, who was later to become commandant of the Navy Yard as a rear admiral, called Lee to him one day and said:

"Jesse, I'm putting you on the $2 a day payroll. That is a man's pay and I expect you to do a man's work."

It isn't quite accurate, therefore, to say Lee has been in the same job 52 years. He was a "boy" until Capt. McCormick gave him a 50-cent raise and put him on "man's work." He kept moving up the grades until his appointment in 1900 as chief clerk, which is one of the highest civilian posts at the yard.

Brummett, the man responsible for Lee's accepting a "temporary" job under Uncle Sam, was transferred to the chief clerkship of the Bureau of Ordnance in 1893. His successor, W. M. Folger, died in office and the vacancy was filled by Brummett's "boy," Jesse B. K. Lee.

He was the most surprised young man in the Nation's Capital the day Capt. E. H. C. Leutze, superintendent of the gun factory, notified him he was the new chief clerk. It was Capt. Leutze, commandant of the Navy Yard from 1905 to 1910 as rear admiral, who brought about Lee's promotion.

"He was a grand character," mused Lee. "His desk was in there (pointing to the adjoining room). He wore dark glasses and some thought he couldn't see so well. But that was their mistake.

"I remember the time he was walking through the grounds when he came upon four colored laborers who were loafing. When they saw him, they picked up the steel bar they were supposed to transfer from one shop to another and got on their way double-quick. Well, they marched a ways and then when they thought they were safe from Capt. Leutze's sight they slowed up to a snail's pace.

Eyesight Not So Bad.

"When they finally reached the proper building, Capt. Leutze was there ahead of them to pass out a sour look for each. Without their knowing it, he had followed them over the entire route. Don't tell me that man's eyesight was bad!"

That reminded Lee how the officer happened to join the Navy.

A German artist named Leutze, some of whose work may be seen in the Capitol, won the favor of President Abraham Lincoln by the beauty of his paintings. Lincoln, seeking an opportunity to show his appreciation, asked the artist if he had any children.

"I have a young son," came the reply, as recounted by Lee, "who is attending school in Germany."

The son, upon Lincoln's suggestion, was brought to the United States and admitted to the Naval Academy. He served with distinction in the Civil War. His name was E. H. C. Leutze, Lee's one-time boss. His son, Trevor W., followed in his Annapolis footsteps and is now a captain attached to the Supply Corps.

Born and reared in Washington, Lee has not only seen but participated in development of the naval gun factory from humble beginnings to its present rank as one of the world's finest.

"When I came here," he said, "guns were hauled by ox teams, not locomotives. I'll never forget that first locomotive. It was christened 'Clear the Way.' The engineer was so darn proud of it he kept the bell and steam whistle going continuously."

Mr. and Mrs. Lee live at 7064 Eastern avenue, Takoma Park. And it is Mrs. Lee who deserves much, if not all, the credit for the chief clerk's lengthy service record. When the doctor told him a few years ago he'd better come down off those 191 pounds of avoirdupois, Mrs. Lee's diet discipline brought him down to a more healthful 161 pounds.

Knox Demands Roosevelt View On Wage Rises

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Oct. 15.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican nominee for Vice President, demanded tonight that President Roosevelt deny or confirm that he plans to raise wages and shorten hours by a Federal law, if re-elected.

Knox, in an address here, said that Gov. Earle of Pennsylvania, in a recent speech in Altoona, quoted the President as "promising" such a measure would be enacted.

"I ask the President if Gov. Earle has misquoted him," Knox said. "If not, I ask the President what he means by that promise.

"The Supreme Court has declared that the NRA violated the Constitution of the United States. It has declared that the Federal Government has no power to regulate industry within the States."

"Here we have one more illustration of the incredible situation that confronts the Nation. * * * I ask the President another question, which I asked last night in Springfield, Ill. What plans are there for assaulting the Supreme Court and nullifying the Constitution?

"In a recent book, a member of the Cabinet said he hoped the Constitution could be scrapped without bloodshed. I ask the President if he approves that statement.

"If not, I ask why does he not immediately remove Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, from his position and return him to Iowa?

"How long would Alfred M. Landon have in his Cabinet a man who wants the Constitution scrapped, bloodlessly if possible, but scrapped? Just the time it took to get to a telephone.

"Let me give another example. In a syndicated article from the pen of Jay Franklin, a New Deal writer, there is this sinister statement:

"'Behind the election lies the Hindenburg line of the Supreme Court and its usurped power to nullify the public will.'

"Note that statement, charging the Supreme Court with usurping power and stating that the future of the Supreme Court depends on the election. Once more I ask: Does the President disavow and condemn that statement?"

"I see that the President has been talking about the farm policy," Knox said. "What policy? Does he mean the policy he promised when he was a candidate, or the utterly different policy of the AAA? Or is it the trick farm policy they have now, put in to evade the Supreme Court's decision? Or is it the policy that will be put in after this one is thrown out?"

Knox declared that "this Nation cannot afford to go wrong at this election" and is "not going to go wrong." It is, he said, "the last stronghold of free enterprise and ordered liberty," the "last defense against the forces of class hate and civil revolution rampant throughout the world."

"It may well be that this Nation is the instrument to preserve free government in the world," he said.

N. C. Jury Frees Woman Of Murdering Husband

Henderson, N. C., Oct. 15 (AP).—Mrs. Ruby Wilder Ellington, 34, first woman ever tried in Vance County for a capital offense, was acquitted today of a charge that she murdered her husband, Hartwell Ellington. The jury deliberated 1 hour and 40 minutes.

Mrs. Ellington, who sat quietly during the week-long trial as witnesses accused her of firing point-blank at her husband while he counted his money at a cafe, remained calm. She insisted from the witness stand that she fired only after her husband reached for his pocket as though to draw a gun.

Senora de Albertini Feted At Colorful Birthday Party

By Marylyn Reeve.

Amid a profusion of great fluffy chrysanthemums and numerous tables laden with colorful salads, platters of cakes and large punch bowls, Dr. Oscar Albertini and his niece, Senorita Marguerita Montero, entertained at a reception yesterday at the Shoreham for Senora de Albertini in honor of the latter's birthday. Smiling graciously and taking time to say more than a mere "how do you do" to each, Senora de Albertini, a petite person, gowned in smartly severe black, greeted her guests. Both she and her niece, who also chose black for the party costume, had corsages of Belmont gardenias.

Opposite the door as one entered the apartment stood a high basket of red and cream colored roses, artistically arranged in the French doors leading out onto the balcony. At each side of this "indoor garden" were seen the lights of the traffic moving across the bridge.

Although nominally a reception and afternoon function, the party really amounted to much more than that. The guests lingered, partaking of all the refreshments and particularly the delectable concoction of rice and black Cuban beans. They could go from one room to another, just to suit their moods. In the main salon, the newcomers and leavers gathered to chat with their hosts and each other; in the dining room, a glance at one of the tables would decide one to tarry quite a while; in the sun porch there was music and impromptu dances and songs were willingly presented; and out on the balcony there was the view of the city shrouded in the gathering blue of evening with lights sparkling in the distance.

Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the Minister of the Dominican Republic, who was telling Senora de Lozano, wife of the Minister of Honduras, about her flight back to Washington from New York a day ago, had on a gown of deep red crepe, a small, close-fitting harmonizing hat, and a silver fox cape. Her attentive listener was wearing all-black and a small beret-styled hat of antelope. Across the room their husbands were engaged in serious conversation with Mr. Thomas Burke.

Mrs. Burke, who was wearing a black faille frock printed with small white clusters and a black turban with a brief nose veil, and the Cuban Ambassador, Senor Dr. Guillermo Patterson y de Jauregui, were chuckling over a remark made by their host as he passed them.

The Ecuadorian Ambassador, Senor Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro, who is still startled just a little when addressed by his new title, was accompained by Senora de Alfaro, whose black crepe frock had a unique collar of strands of cream-colored beads.

Others present included Senor Enrique Patterson, son of the Cuban Ambassador, and Senora de Patterson, who was in black; Mr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Guillermo Lewis, in gunmetal lame with touches of vivid green velvet; Mrs. Thomas Abbott, of Baltimore, in midnight blue wool crepe; Mr. Paul Daniel, Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor and Mrs. William S. Culbertson.

Lieut. Bolton Host at Party

It was definitely a "Navy" party, many officers and their wives being present.

Among the guests were the President's naval aid, Capt. Paul H. Bastedo, who was accompanied by Mrs. Bastedo. Capt. John Beardall, aid to the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Claude Swanson, was present with Mrs. Beardall who wore a black wool crepe dress trimmed with white and a matching hat.

Others there were Brig. Gen. John C. Beaumont, U. S. M. C.; Lieut. and Mrs. Elmer Berthod, Capt. William D. Puleston, director of Naval Intelligence, with Mrs. Puleston; Lieut. Robert Campbell, in command of the Sequoia, and Commander and Mrs. Frederick G. Reinicke.

Daughter Is Born To the Gammacks

From Providence, R. I., comes news of the birth of a daughter on October 8 to Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Gammack, of New York, who are guests of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm G. Chace.

Mr. and Mrs. Gammack spent sometime in Washington while he was special assistant to Mr. Joseph Kennedy, former chairman of the Social Securities Board. For several months they occupied the apartment of Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel in Connecticut avenue.

Miss Georgine Zelenka, Mr. Palic Married Here

Of interest to diplomatic and residential circles was the wedding at noon yesterday of Miss Georgine Zelenka, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zelenka, to Mr. Vladimir Palic, Attache of the Czechoslovakian Legation. The ceremony took place at St. Paul's Lutheran Church, the Rev. Henry Snyder officiating. Palms, ferns and white chrysanthemums formed the decorations.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin trimmed in velvet, with a tulle veil held in place by a velvet halo. She carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Lucille Nussbaum, her maid of honor, wore a frock of aquamarine satin, with a small turban and nose veil of matching shade, and carried yellow chrysanthemums. The bridesmaids were the Misses Margaret Bittinger, Cordelia Griffin and Florence Seri. They wore frocks of old rose taffeta and matching hats similar to that of the maid of honor, and carried orchid colored chrysanthemums.

Dr. Joseph Zelenka, brother of the bride, was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Raymond Mazzo, Mr. John Seri, Mr. Francis Zalesak and Dr. Fernando Sacasa, nephew of the former president of Nicaragua.

Reception Follows.

A reception at the home of the bride's parents immediately followed the ceremony. Mrs. Zelenka, who received with the bridal couple, wore a gown of black velvet with white vest and rhinestone buttons. The bridegroom's aunt, Mrs. Zelmira Tonaska, of Connellsville, Pa., who also received with them, likewise wore black velvet and both had corsages of gardenias.

The house was decorated with palms, ferns and a profusion of autumn flowers. In the dining room the bride's cake formed the centerpiece on the table, which was appointed in pink and white. The guests were served typical Czechoslovakian dishes, among them eggs, stuffed with a paste, over which was a gelatin coloring, with little lemon rinds forming handles by which to pick them up.

Colony Dinner Guests.

The bride threw her bouquet, which was caught by Miss Doris Fogel, of Washington. The bridal couple left following the reception for a wedding trip by motor to Florida, the bride wearing a wine-colored suit with a silver fox collar. On their return they will reside in Washington.

The departure of the bride and groom by no means ended the day's festivities for the wedding guests. They remained well into the afternoon and members of the Czechoslovakian colony who have long been residents of Washington were guests at the dinner last night at the home of the bride's parents.

Among the wedding guests were the Charge d'Affaires of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Josef Nemecek, and members of the staff of the legation; Miss Gracielo Trucco, daughter of the Ambassador of Chile, accompanied by Miss Maruca Sacasa, daughter of the former president of Nicaragua, who is here from New York City, visiting her; the bride's uncle, Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, and Mrs. Hrdlicka; the Charge d'Affaires of Yugoslavia, Mr. Rastko Petrovic; the Naval Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Sable, the Air Attache of the French Embassy and Mme. Champsaur, the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, Mr. George Boncesco, and the Attache of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Michael Budney.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. Tonaska, the bridegroom's aunt, with her daughter, Miss Vera Tonaska, and her son, Mr. Theodore Tonaska; Mr. and Mrs. Vaclaz Fisher, of Chicago, uncle and aunt of the bride; Dr. John Papanek, counsel for the Czechoslovakian Republic in Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Papanek, and Mrs. Josephus Zelenka and Mrs. Louis Hajek, of Cleveland, Ohio, aunts of the bride.

Lord, Lady Astor Plan Trip to Bermuda Oct. 23

Lady Nancy Astor, who is expected to visit Washington some time before she returns to England, has made tentative plans to go to Bermuda with Lord Astor, October 23, it is understood, and will return to England about November 26.

She is now visiting in Virginia and will be joined there by Lord Astor, who is expected to arrive in the United States October 20.

Mrs. Jean R. Neil and her sister, Miss Barbara Trepanier, of Philadelphia, are at the Shoreham while visiting their uncle, Mr. J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency.

Former Spanish Queen Is Guest Of Lady Lindsay

Lady Lindsay, wife of the Ambassador of Great Britain, will have as her guest today and overnight the former Queen Victoria Eugenie, of Spain, who will arrive in Washington this afternoon on her first visit to the Capital.

She will be accompanied by her daughter, Infanta Beatriz, and her husband, Prince Torlonia, with the latter's mother, Princess Torlonia, the former Elsie Moore, of New York.

The visit of the former queen, who was a British princess, a granddaughter of Queen Victoria, will be brief, and her short time in Washington will be spent quietly. Her trip here is a little holiday before her return to Europe after several weeks at the bedside of her son, Count de Covadonga, by whose serious illness she was called to America. The count, who is now improved in health, may accompany her on her return.

Trinity Alumnae in City To Hold Banquet Monday

The Misses Catherine Schaefer and Katharine Lee are in charge of arrangements for a banquet at the Mayflower Hotel on Monday of the Washington Chapter of Trinity College Alumnae. The banquet is in honor of Washington girls who were graduated from the college last June.

The reception committee will include Mrs. Lawrence Grogan, Miss Helen Carroll, Miss Maud Gaynor, Miss Margaret Wallace and Miss Florence O'Donoghue. Miss Adele Cavanagh is president of the Washington Chapter of the Alumnae Club.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Cope, of Pasadena, Calif., are at the Wardman Park.

The Merry Whirl

By Marylyn.

An incoming train naturally causes a flurry of excitement, but yesterday afternoon the 2:35 from New York was met by more than the usual amount of hustle and bustle, grins and jolly greetings. The Chilean team members were on board. Arriving early at the station, we found that Maj. Frank Whittaker, his daughter, Jane, and the welcoming committee of the Army had been even earlier. Over by gate 20 Commissioner Melvin Hazen, his dark suit brightened by a yellow posie in his buttonhole, paced up and down, glancing at his watch. Over by the blackboard Col. Jonathan Wainwright, Maj. James Duke, Maj. Arthur Thayer and Col. John Millikin, all attired in O. D., gleaming buttons and clanking spurs, talked and laughed as they waited.

The Commercial Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Campbell—she in mahogany brown, a cluster of burnt orange velvet flowers on her shoulder, just matching the brim facing of her hat, which was dark brown—and their daughter, Eleanor, in black with a silver fox collar on her coat, were very prompt in arriving, and had just come from the noon wedding of Marie Zelenka to Dr. Vladimir M. Palic, of the Czechoslovakian Legation. Eleanor, as a matter of fact, was twirling a white rosebud in her fingers, and we learned that it had come from the bridal bouquet.

Senora de Puga, in black with gold clips and accents on her frock, and her husband, the Air Attache of the embassy, Squadron Commander C. Alfredo Puga, were the next to arrive.

The Chilean Ambassador, Senor Don Manuel Trucco, was accompanied by his daughter, Marta, who was wearing a tailored suit of dark blue twill with a little Scotch-effect hat of matching felt. They were joined by Dr. Leo S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union, and the First Secretary and Senora de Huneeus, in black with a sable cape.

* * * *

Amazement was written on the faces of the passengers leaving the train who found themselves surrounded by uniforms, formally clad officials and pretty dark-eyed senoras and senoritas chattering in Spanish as they alighted. At the far end of the platform were the Chileans and their wives. Capt. Eduardo Yanez, and his pretty golden-haired wife, who were here last year were eagerly greeted by friends made then. She was costumed in gray with a round mushroom hat of green felt. Just before they sailed, her sister, Ives, who looks ever so much like her, became the bride of Lieut. Luis Perez, of the team. She wore a simply designed brown ensemble. Lieut. Pelayo Izurrieta was accompanied by his wife who was in black, and Lieut. Rafael Montti's wife

* * * *

As the new arrivals and their welcoming committee started into the station, there—coming out to pay their respects—were the Mexican riders, led by their tall fair captain, Armando Villarreal.

* * *

The next meeting was only a few hours later at the Army and Navy Club, where Commissioner Hazen and Maj. Whittaker gathered in a few of their friends who have been working hard for the success of the horse show.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Oct. 15.

WHILE the handsome tenor singer, Edward Johnson, corrals his covey of costly canaries for the opera season which opens at the Metropolitan in mid-winter, it is even more interesting to behold the maestro who presents Verdi and Puccini to our multitudes at top price of 55 cents—with a few at 99 for the absolute swells.

ALICE HUGHES.

This public benefactor is Maestro Alfredo Salmaggi, a handsome, leonine gent who affects a huge shock of black hair and a Windsor tie. He dresses the part of a maestro to perfection, and I must say that he lives it, as well. Salmaggi, like Truth, is sometimes crushed to earth, but he always rises again, full of ambition to bring the masters to the masses, and he always does.

Salmaggi's base of operations at present is the big Hippodrome which houses wrestling matches, "skating derbies" and conventions, as well as the gentler arts. Every week-end, however, the maestro moves his herd of warblers into the place, and it is a thrilling thing to see a crowd of 5,000 at one of his performances.

The performance of "Boheme" I heard last week may not have been quite up to Metropolitan standards, but as the good maestro puts it, as he runs his fingers through that mop of hair, "whether it says 55 cents or $7.70 on the ticket, Puccini's Puccini!" And he's right.

• • • •

You might do worse than behold what this eager Italian is doing for music lovers who don't own ermine capes. It's mighty interesting. And he digs up clever youngsters. His find this fall is one Ruth Rooney, of whom you'll hear more.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Night club openings follow each other with frightful rapidity, and my two little evening items are getting a hectic workout. I went to the opening of my favorite of all local rooms, the Maisonette Russe at the St. Regis—a charming spot which is always hub deep in the local Russian colony, with much bowing from the hips and kissing the hand.

Vincent Astor, who owns the place, turned up for the opening ceremonies, and his close buddy, Serge Obolensky, keeps a watchful eye on the caviar bin.

The same night saw the formal opening of the Rainbow Room for the year, which drew another fancy turnout, and the prettiest thing in the lavish room was Mrs. Paul Whiteman, wearing white and silver lame . . . If you want to buy a few seats to see the big parade for Edward VIII's coronation, you can rush right over here and interview J. Erskine Johnson, who's now at the Waldorf with a fistful of pasteboards for the event. He has 1,100 of them, in fact, and is willing to let them go at such trifling sums as from $105 to $525, depending on location. Johnson even let me touch some of the expensive ones, but no business. I thanked him kindly and told him I thought I'd wait for the newsreels . . .

Today's HEALTH TALK

Equanimity Aids Digestion.

Calm and rest after eating have long been advocated as important hygienic measures. Cows will graze for a time and then lie down to ruminate reminiscently over the succulent character of their fodder. "Old Dog Tray" will bolt his food and then seek a comfortable place for rest and sleep, thus allowing a generous amount of blood to reach the digestive glands.

Not so human beings. We have too little sense. The average American breakfast is a hurried meal followed by a rush to work. The noon lunch may be eaten hastily, washed down with a cup of coffee or a glass of milk, so that time for family errands may be available. Then comes the plunge into the tasks of the afternoon. The wise person consumes his meals leisurely, quietly, and without hurry, and either rests or relaxes for a half hour thereafter. It is probably not too much to say that digestion in his case proceeds normally and there will be little reason ever to anticipate stomach or intestinal difficulties.

Gastric Juice Stopped.

Our emotions govern not only the solution but the assimilation of food. As we know, we cannot control the machinery of digestion by an effort of will. What happens to food after it is swallowed depends upon the sympathetic nervous system. If we are upset, disturbed, or worried, not only will the gastric juice cease to form but movements of the stomach may be at a complete standstill.

Fill the mind of one who has eaten an average meal with fear or anxiety and food will remain in the stomach for many hours. We must remember that although no disease is present the nervous control over the digestive tract has been so interfered with that it cannot function.

Walter Cannon tells of the method employed in India for the detection of a thief. It is known as the rice test. Suspected persons are given rice to chew and the guilty one, filled with fear, will have so dry a mouth that mastication is impossible.

The thing to do is to avoid excitement around meal time. It is necessary for good health to permit digestion to take place naturally, and without inhibitions. True enough, we must be alert to danger, but if it comes the adrenal glands will throw into the circulation an extra supply of their product—thus enabling us to meet an emergency. But we can shun the constant, needless stimulation of the sympathetic nervous system which will be attended in the long run with illness.

Winner of Guggenheim Award Emphasizes Rest, Practice.

By Elizabeth Young.

MARTHA GRAHAM achieves her highest point of integration when dancing before an audience. But only if her body is rested and perfectly disciplined. If she is tired, or has neglected her practice, she is nervous, struggling, tense.

It is her purpose to create a condition of vitality in the minds of her watchers. For that, she believes, is the function of the theater, of all art.

"I simply try to give an experience," says this tenth-generation American, who is a direct descendant of Miles Standish; who broke with the tradition of Oriental and musical interpretative dancing to evolve a technique of her own; who was awarded a fellowship by the Guggenheim Foundation—the first award of its kind ever made to a dancer—for her important contribution to the cultural history of America.

"I want to move people. I would rather they be for me, but if they have to be against me, it is better than that they be apathetic. Sometimes their reaction takes the form of argument. They don't like my technique, definitely and positively. Others like it. Still others are entertained, and they go away and forget. That is the type of individual who is pernicious to the theater. The theater must not be regarded as a means of escape, but as a means of intensifying life."

"Dancing," says Miss Graham, "is a very living art. It is essentially of the moment, although a very old art. A dancer's life is lived while he is dancing. Nothing is left of his art except pictures and memories when his dancing days are over. What he has to contribute to the sum total of human experience must be done through the dance. It cannot be transmitted at any other time, in any other way.

Dancer Ages Quickly.

Paradoxically, the dancer ages more quickly and holds on to youth longer than any other artist. "That is because he is forced to assume responsibility almost at once," says Miss Graham. "His age has nothing to do with years. It has to do with experience. His face is so sensitively attuned to what he feels that his expression is mature. The youngest girl in my troupe is 17. Sometimes at rehearsals she looks 22 or 24. Then again when she is dancing she may look only 14 or 15."

Miss Graham was interviewed at The Play House, where she had come for the day to lecture to students on the fundamentals of interpretative dancing. From her studio in New York City she will come to Washington once a month during the winter to teach young women the art of which she is America's foremost modern exponent. At the same time, she will wind up her transcontinental tour of America, started earlier in the year—making cross-country dashes from New York to far points and back to Washington again to keep her engagements.

Asked why she broke with traditional techniques of interpretative dancing, Miss Graham explained: "The history of the dance is the social history of the world. The dance was born from certain periods in history. And while the underlying principles are always the same, never to be departed from, governed by laws of coordination which are universal and for all time—because the body is the instrument of the dance—nevertheless, the period in which one is dancing makes the greatest difference in what one has to say through the dance.

The Modern Dance.

"The dance is the dancer's way of portraying intensely man's attitude in a given period of history toward man, toward religion, toward environment. I am giving the modern American chapter."

Miss Graham does not attempt to clothe her mind in a given mood, such as might seem to be suggested by the title of a given dance, before entering upon its movements.

"I allow the form of the dance to give me back the certain emotional quality which goes with it," she says. "I do not put myself consciously into that mood before the dance. I strive at all times to let the thing happen to me. I remain simple, as free as possible from any forced or extraneous prompting. But I must be very sure of all my movements. If my hand goes one place one day, it must go exactly the same place the next day. If, in the 'Imperial Gesture,' I lifted my skirt with two fingers at one performance, I must use those same two fingers in exactly the same way at all successive performances. There is no varying of pattern. The pattern of the dance is as formal as music. One remembers such movements with one's body, muscularly. The thing has gone so deep within one that it is hard to say how one remembers.

"I couldn't say what passes through my mind when dancing on the stage," says Miss Graham. "I only know that then, extremely conscious of the audience, hypersensitive to sound and whisper, I feel my highest point of integration—if I have done my practicing. If I haven't, I am under that point—nervous, struggling, tense."

Artist and Audience.

If anyone supposes interpretative dancing is "just getting up and having a lovely time," he is wrong, says Martha Graham. Emotion alone can't sustain the dancer. His is not a decorative art. It is profound and meaningful. He must work hard, keep his body trained and his mind conditioned and then, if he has anything to say, he finds the means of expressing himself.

The difference between the artist and his audience, Miss Graham explains thus: "Everybody feels deeply. The artist differs from the layman not in the intensity and scope of his feelings, but only in his ability to objectify them."

Born in Pittsburgh, Pa., Miss Graham was the daughter of a well-known nerve specialist. The family moved to Santa Barbara, Calif., when she was 10. There she grew up and received her education. She cannot remember a time when she did not long to dance, and at the age of 2 she horrified her mother by slipping out of the family pew during church service and dancing solemnly down the aisle to the offertory music. After that early debut she was forced by parental pressure to confine her performances to the family kitchen, where she danced with Lizzie, her nurse, as audience.

Wins Father Over.

Her father was definitely set against her taking dancing lessons, and it was not until she was 16 that Martha Graham had an opportunity to study. This opportunity came about because, after seeing a recital in Santa Barbara by Ruth St. Denis—the first dance recital she had ever seen—she was so moved by the performance that she dared defy her father. At last she obtained his permission to go to Los Angeles to study with Miss St. Denis.

In 1919 she became a member of the Denishawn Concert Company, remaining with them until 1923, dancing in winter and teaching in summer. From 1923 to 1925 she taught at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y. At this time she began to evolve her own technique, the technique which has revolutionized the art of dance. In 1926 she gave her first recital in New York City—greeted by a varied response from the public but with the unanimous prophesy that here was a dancer about whom much would be heard in future. She has not failed the prophets.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: After reading "Carolyn's" letter, to which you made reply in your column of October 7, I am moved to offer her a little encouragement. I know from experience that a woman can "get her man" through an exchange of letters, if she makes up her mind to do it.

Some years ago I met a man under similar circumstances. It happened that he was in the Army and on leave at the time. At the end of our vacations I came back home to Washington and he went back to Texas, where he was then stationed. By means of letters, we kept up our acquaintance, and some time later, after another meeting, we became engaged. (I might add that nothing ever came of the engagement. Later it was broken by mutual consent, but we are still friends and neither has married yet.)

I have at the present time a problem similar to Carolyn's. And bearing in mind my previous experience (although I am now quite a bit older) I am not discouraged. I met this man last summer on my vacation. He is 3,000 miles away, even farther than Carolyn's man. But he was sufficiently impressed (though I saw him but once) to go several hundred miles out of his way on a business trip East to come down to Washington to see me. I count that some encouragement.

He has written me since he went home and I have answered him. I tried to make my letter clever and interesting and personal, too. These letters have to be fitted to the personality of the one for whom they are intended. Possibly I never will hear from him again, but I think I will. I want this man just as badly as Carolyn wants hers. And I am going to make some effort to get him—even though I have to write some letters to do it.

• • • •

I think you were a little too discouraging to Carolyn. She can do it if she tries. And if you have any specific, concrete suggestions to make to me as to how to "get my man" in a shorter time, I would appreciate them. At any rate, good luck to Carolyn. Never say die. If you want him, go after him—subtly, of course, but still, go after him.

Sincerely, CAROLYN II.

Foolhardy Ambition.

DEAR CAROLYN II: "A miss is as good as a mile," it is said. The fact that your engagement to the Texas Army man came to naught would seem to indicate that while a woman may "get her man" by correspondence, either she can't hold him after she gets him, or he isn't worth keeping after being lured into the bag. Both of you Carolyns candidly confess your willingness to marry men you have seen only twice. That, I would say, is carrying the spirit of adventurousness to the point of foolhardiness.

• • • •

I must admit my helpfulness stops short of giving "specific, concrete suggestions" for corraling a husband by correspondence. The reasons are two. In the first place, it is impossible for me to manufacture magnetic tete-a-tete conversation, or to lay down rules for making such conversation, between persons who are as much strangers to each other as they are to me; about whose age, tastes, temperaments, personalities and general backgrounds I know absolutely nothing. And letter writing is simply another medium of conversation, polite or intimate, as the case may be. In the second place, I should not like to shoulder the responsibility for encouraging such ill-starred match-making, even if I could say the word which would bring such alliances to life.

• • • •

Marriage is too serious, too responsible a relationship to be entered into in the manner of fools rushing in where angels fear to tread. If you two Carolyns chose to focus all your energies on getting your faraway men, you must push your projects in your own way and at your own risk. In my opinion you are wasting time and postage, and if your sieges fail, it will probably be your good fortune. M. H.

Old Methods Outmoded, Ballerina Holds, Explaining Art.

Forcing Good Manners on Boy Borders on Unkind and Useless

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

This immemorial protest of the growing boy against the trammels of formal society still continues. Mothers still deck their sons for the sacrifice, in clean clothes and shining hair, and lead them or drive them to the class. And the boys, sweating and glum, go through the appropriate motions, and under their breath mutter insults and curses at all the smug little girls.

Ordinary ballroom dancing does not require a tremendous amount of skill and training. A few weeks of intensive work on the part of a boy who really wants to dance can do more than years of unwilling attendance at dancing school.

Until a boy is 15 or 16 he generally is and should be an unsocial creature. The boy who likes to dress up and go to parties is rare, and is apt to be something of a sissy. To force more than the barest essentials of good manners on the growing boy is unkind and useless. He should be able to eat acceptably at table, to meet strangers with some ease, to show courtesy to ladies. More than that is too much to ask.

Not until he has begun to look at girls with some interest, instead of tolerating them as a necessary evil, will he begin to brush his hair, shine his shoes, clean his nails, consider his suits and ties and see the needs of learning how to dance.

If he has a sense of rhythm, which is developed far better in a music than a dancing class, he will pick up dancing with no effort, often without lessons, and become a first-class dancing partner in no time at all. The hours that would have been devoted to dancing might well have been given to lessons in rhythm and jazz.

Yankee Accent.

While waiting to see an official the other day, we couldn't help but overhear part of the telephone conservation of one of his stenographers. She was a pretty belle, apparently fresh from the Southland, and seemed to be having a good deal of difficulty in taking down the message. Finally, in exasperation, she exclaimed to the person at the other end of the wire:

Positions as assistant actuarial mathematician at $2,600 a year and junior actuarial mathematician at $2,000 a year are open in the Railroad Retirement and Social Security Boards. Civil Service application deadline is November 2.

"Red" Lodges.

Present strategy of the opposing forces in the battle of the "red" lodges on the A. F. G. E. front can be boiled down to this:

Officials at national headquarters are soft-pedaling all developments for fear that expulsion of the five "New Deal" lodges on grounds of "communism" may be injected into the political campaign, while sympathizers of the expelled lodges, sensing that advantage as long as the threat of political repercussions hangs over national headquarters, are trying to push through the reaffiliation of the expelled groups.

On the other side, President Stengle has written a letter to Gardner Jackson, dismissed AAA aid, saying that because of the nonpartisan character of the A. F. G. E. it had become necessary to place the record of the Detroit convention "under lock and key" until after the elections.

On the other side, Agriculture Lodge, No. 131, which obtained a refutation of John Dyer's "Communist" accusations from Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, has sent a resolution to A. F. of L. President William Green, asking that the expelled lodges be "unconditionally reinstated with full membership privileges."

"The grounds for the removal of these lodges were, as you know, undocumented and unproved charges of radical activity and embarrassing leadership," reads the Agriculture resolution. "This lodge, in agreement with many A. F. G. E. lodges and a majority of the local press, feels that this was a most undemocratic way for the A. F. G. E. to rid itself of a minority group which it felt to be troublesome. Surely the labor movement in the United States was not built to its present high estate by resorting to such tactics."

Similar resolutions probably will be passed and sent to Green by other "progressive" lodges. National headquarters, however, isn't likely to have its hand forced until after November.

Ice-Melting Meter.

You can hardly appreciate the lengths to which the Department of Agriculture will go to secure reduced freight rates for farmers until you see the new device invented by Edward A. Gorman, a department scientist, to measure the melting of ice in refrigerated cars.

Freight rates for perishable products are set by the Interstate Commerce Commission, in good part on the basis of how much ice is used in making shipments. Up to now there has been no means of measuring ice meltage accurately. Such an ice-meltage meters would not only provide the commission with more accurate data, but added savings in not piling up bins with unnecessary ice.

Up to now, ice meltage has been measured chiefly through guesswork—bins are filled and at the end of a trip meltage is estimated by a glance at the ice remaining. Gorman's device, fitted under the refrigerating car, catches the melted ice water and measures its flow in cubic feet. As soon as the ice water in the trap reaches a certain level, a valve is released and the water rushes out through the meter.

Gorman has been testing his meter for more than six months, with shipments that have traveled 102,000 miles and over which 199,880 pounds of melted ice were measured. The tests have been uniformly successful, which is no mean achievement when one considers that each measuring device has 36 attachments, any one of which being off would make the test worthless.

Arkansas Society Gives Dinner Here

The Arkansas State Society held a dinner and pre-game rally at the Hotel Willard last night in honor of Arkansans and to mark the meeting at Griffith Stadium tonight of the University of Arkansas and George Washington football temas.

Among those present were Carl E. Bailey Democrtaic nominee for Governor, Senator Hattie Caraway, Mrs. Louise McPhetridge Thaden, recent winner of the Bendix Trophy air race, and Mary Lewis, opera singer.

Work at Airport Half Completed

Washington's $100,000 airport runway construction program reached the half-way point yesterday, and, despite several unforeseen obstacles which have arisen in connection with the drainage of the field, Daniel H. Reed, construction engineer, said he was confident the entire program would be completed on schedule November 15.

Completion of paving on half of each of the two main runways already has been completed, the final seal coat having been applied yesterday. Also completed is a major portion of the taxi-strip connecting the runways, hangar and terminal buildings.

Board Seeks D. C. Channel Improvement

Trade Group Committee Also to Ask Work at Hains Point.

Harbor Project Is Most Important, Chairman Remon Says.

Improvement of Washington Channel and clearance of the mud bank off the south sea wall at Hains Point will be the principal objectives of the Washington Board of Trade rivers and harbors improvement committee, the personnel of which was named yesterday by J. A. Remon, chairman.

At an organization meeting of 30 members of the committee Remon outlined a program of activity for the coming year, and assigned 78 men to work on five sub-committees.

The harbor improvement project is by far the most extensive job to be done, Remon said. It will provide yacht basins, piers and bulkhead walls on the north shore of the channel from the Tidal Basin to the Army War College. The cost, the chairman reported, is estimated at $1,650,000, of which $689,000 is to be borne by the District government. A fund of $15,000 has already been made available for architect's plans for the improvement.

Unsightly Condition.

"This improvement is desirable," Remon said, "not only because it will better harbor facilities, but also because it will correct the unsightly condition of the area."

Branding the mud bank in the Potomac River channel a "disgrace," Remon urged the sub-committee assigned to the job to exert every effort to find a way to remove it. The cost of the job has been estimated at $125,000.

Other improvements to be considered by the committee this year, Remon said, should include drafting of harbor regulations and further elimination of river pollution.

Reporting progress on the work of deepening the river channel, the chairman congratulated the committee on its efforts in achieving results there. The War Department now is dredging different river channels within the District to a 24-foot depth.

Cost Is $325,000.

"This job will cost approximately $325,000," the chairman reported. "I understand the annual savings in the hauling of materials in and out of the District will be $200,000. I think that makes the project a good business investment."

Remon named vice chairmen to take charge of the several sub-committees. Henry H. Baker will be the committee's secretary and F. E. Smith the assistant secretary.

Wharf committee—Kirby Smith, vice chairman; Robert F. Beresford, J. P. Kramer, J. H. Gallihet, T. J. Holmes, jr., Herbert C. Hoover, R. K. Kyle, E. P. Neel, Stanley Pierson, Henry E. Stringer, I. S. Walker.

Port development—E. W. Sapp, vice chairman; C. F. Armiger, G. A. Bonnet, J. B. Cleland, jr., Albert L. Cox, Clarence W. de Knight, William P. Hammers, P. Y. K. Howat, William J. McManus, E. K. Norris, Lester B. Powell, S. T. Price, L. E. Rubel, Conrad C. Smith, Henry A. Willard 2d, Tom E. Wrathall.

Miscellaneous projects—H. O. Leighton, vice chairman; E. J. Boothby, William C. Brooks, Aubrey L. Clark, T. Carlisle Crump, Granville Gude, D. L. R. Harris, James B. Henderson, jr., R. L. Dean G. Acheson Honored by Yale

Dean Gooderham Acheson, former Undersecretary of the Treasury, now practicing law here, has been elected senior fellow of the Yale Corporation, according to an announcement yesterday by James Rowland Angell, president of Yale University. He succeeds George Grant Mason, of Tuxedo, N. Y., who retired.

Acheson was born in Middletown, Conn., graduated from Yale in the class of 1915, and received the degree of LL. B. at Harvard in 1918.

From 1919 to 1921 he was secretary to Justice Brandeis in this city. Since he has been a partner in the law firm of Covington, Burling & Rublee (now Covington, Burling, Rublee, Acheson & Shorb), except from May to November, 1933, when he served in the Treasury. He was married to Alice Caroline Stanley May 5, 1917, and they have three children.

Benefactor Bails Out Sporty

Sporty, whose capture by the dog catchers aroused the sympathy of a messenger boy, yesterday was bailed out of the pound by Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, who returned him to his master, a flower vendor. Mrs. Williams is holding Wookie, her own dog.

Entire Neighborhood Smiles As Sporty Returns to Owner

A street corner idly, involving a dog, an injured messenger boy, several neighborhood stores, a colored flower vender, a repentant dog-catcher, some fashionable residents of the Northwest, and Commissioner Hazen's dream of a perfect poundmaster, came to a happy ending yesterday for the dog—if not for some of the other dramatis personae.

It all started long ago when Sporty, a German shepherd dog, wandered into the neighborhood of Connecticut avenue and S street northwest and was adopted by Frank Brown, flower vender.

Everybody liked Sporty. Mrs. Elizabeth Williams, 2117 Leroy place, an art teacher who has a dog of her own, used to stop and pet Sporty's head when she bought flowers from Brown. So did numerous other residents.

He Waxed Fat and Happy.

All the people in the grocery liked Sporty and gave him scraps of food. Employes in a nearby automobile agency remembered to take him things to eat. As a result Sporty waxed fat and happy, especially when Brown would rub his rough fur and talk to him.

But disaster overshadowed Sporty's happiness. He had no tag—a grim crime for any Washington dog. The catastrophe struck Tuesday when someone telephoned Frank Marks, new District poundmaster, that an untagged, leashless dog was running loose in the neighborhood.

Now Marks is extremely proud of his humanitarianism. He is quite an unusual dog catcher—the embodiment of Commissioner Hazen's ideal of a dogcatcher. The Commissioner had hunted and hunted before he found the right man, before he gave Marks the honor. So, Marks had a career at stake every time he went out to apprehend a dog.

Messenger Disapproves.

Marks and his assistant, Clyde Underwood, hopped into their wagon to take Sporty into custody. Clifton Plummer, 100-pound messenger boy, was at the street corner when the minions of canine law and order jerked to a stop. Marks sat on the front seat while Underwood tried to ensnare Sporty.

Plummer watched the proceedings with a frown. He made some wisecracks to Underwood concerning his professional ineptness. Finally Underwood got out his net, chased Sporty and bagged him.

As Underwood tossed Sporty into the cage the disapproving messenger said one of two things, which were reported as follows: "I'd like to throw you in right behind him," or "How would you like to be thrown in a truck like that?"

Underwood lost his temper. A scuffle ensued and Plummer emerged with a cut on the head and a cracked tooth. Marks sat on the front seat wringing his hands. Here, all too quickly, his career was being wrecked. He ordered Underwood to get in and hasten away.

On Tuesday Plummer tried to have Underwood arrested for assault. The case was continued until next Tuesday. Sporty was in the doghouse, and so was Brown, whose flower vender soul almost burst. The neighbors were sorrowing, and employes of all the neighborhood stores were as a composite mother bereft of its babe.

Comes to the Rescue.

In this darkest hour, Mrs. Williams came to the rescue. She went to the stores and took up a collection to save Sporty from possible death. With her fund she taxied to the pound, stopping on the way to buy a collar ($1.98), a harness ($1) and a tag ($2). She had "bail" money, too.

It was a great climax to two days of work and worry. Sporty was released to the pop of flashlight bulbs, smiles, tail-wagging and a chorus of yaps from inmates in the next room.

Brown now has custody of a tagged and harnessed Sporty, and will keep him in his back yard nights and chat with him daytime in his paradise regained, until snow flies and drives him indoors for the winter.

Underwood has said he was sorry he hit the messenger boy, and volunteered to pay his doctor's and dentist's bills. He was very apologetic and hoped he hadn't gotten his boss in wrong with Hazen. Marks, whom Mrs. Williams described as "an extraordinarily nice man, who wants to be nice to everybody," is prayerful that his heretofore unscarred reputation has not been irreparably damaged.

Groups Ask Rehearing on 1-Man Cars

3 Agencies Brand Order as 'Capricious and Inconsistent.'

Not Based on Complete Findings, They Say in Appeal.

A 14-point attack on the one-man street car order of the Public Utilities Commission was contained yesterday in a petition for rehearing filed by three agencies.

The brief, which charged that the order was full of errors, was signed by People's Counsel William A. Roberts, who will retire on November 1, William McK. Clayton, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Charlton Ogburn, counsel of the American Federation of Labor, acting for the Washington Central Labor Union.

The petition, which probably will be acted upon by the commission next week, asserted that the order "imposes a distinctly inferior class of operation of street cars * * * wtihout established cause."

Called Inconsistent.

The order is "capricious and inconsistent," the petition stated, "in that it finds that the Capital Transit Co. may acquire and convert second-hand cars of obsolete type to one-man operation for the purpose of replacement, but it also finds that additional cars would not be safe or adequate for one-man operation unless of the modern President's conference type."

The three attorneys charged the order was not based on complete findings of fact but irrelevant and immaterial testimony.

It "ignores the evidence of fatigue and nervous strain upon operators of one-man cars with the resultant increase of the demands upon labor," the brief stated.

The order is "predicated upon erroneous findings of the financial condition of the petitioner," the attorneys said, "the result of distorted presentation of operating statistics and of the inclusion in operating expenses of large non-recurring sums expended in the rehabilitation of the property in connection with the merging of the operations."

Findings of fact as to the credit of the Capital Transit Co. and "its ability to secure from its proprietor, the North American Co., or from others capital for the installation of adequate two-man equipment" likewise were labeled erroneous.

The petition similarly attacked the findings of fact of the commission as to the safety and speed of one-man and two-man cars under similar operating conditions.

The Federation of Citizens Associations already has indicated its intention to carry the appeal to court if the commission denies a re-hearing.

Engraving Office Reports Epidemic Of 'Ink Poisoning'

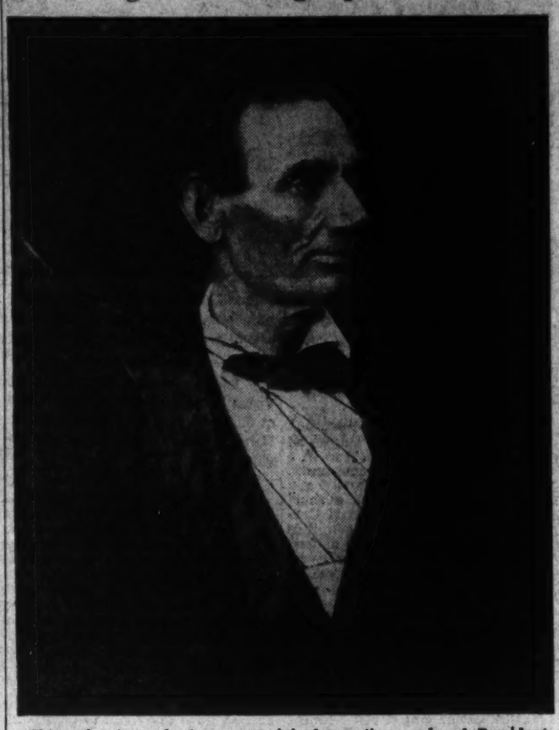
Ink poisoning, infection of the printers' trade, was blamed yesterday for the illness of several plate printers at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, it was revealed last night.

With several printers suffering from severe skin rashes, officials of the United States Public Health Service started a study to trace the poison to its source.

Dr. P. A. Neal, one of several investigating physicians, said every plate printer at the bureau would be examined. Several, it was reported, have been infected in recent weeks and one was forced to remain from work.

The infection, according to Alvin W. Hall, director of the bureau, is as "old as the trade." Various materials and chemicals are used in plate printing and it is from this the workers are poisoned. The infection, Dr. Neal said, is not serious and with intensive study it is hoped a cure will be found.

An Original Photograph of Lincoln



This print is made from an original negative made of President Lincoln in 1860. The plate was broken when it was received by the Smithsonian Institution. The crack shows in the print.

Rare Old Photos Support Story Of Why Abe Lincoln Grew Beard

The old story that a little girl was responsible for Abraham Lincoln's growing a beard is given added support by two photographs of the Great Emancipator which have been acquired by the Smithsonian Instiuttion.

Lincoln had just been elected President when, in November of 1860, Alex Hesler, a Chicago photographer, went to his Springfield, Ill., home and made the two negatives. They show the President-elect as smooth shaven.

In October, 1860, a child admirer of Honest Abe had written him and suggested he grow a beard. When he posed for Hesler, Lincoln had not acted on the advice but at the time of his inauguration the following March his jowls had a fair growth of whiskers.

The two original negatives, of great historical significance, reached the Smithsonian by an odd and devious route. Gratified by Lincoln's satisfaction with the portraits, Hesler kept the wet-plate negatives. Until 1933, when the plates were sold, they remained in possession of Hesler's family. During shipment to St. Louis, they were accidentally broken. The owners lodged a claim with the Postoffice Department. A satisfactory agreement was reached and the negatives became Government property.

So from the files of the department the valuable pictures, from which any number of additional prints may be made, found their way to the Smithsonian and security. Although both plates were cracked, all imperfections have been eliminated by a skillful artist.

Chicagoan to Speak.

Permit to Add To Abattoir Baffles City

Ruhland to Be Guided on Health Phase by Agriculture Unit.

District officials are perplexed over whether enlargement of an existing abattoir in the Northeast would constitute a public nuisance.

Six municipal agencies and two Federal departments are studying the problem, it was learned yesterday, following a protest from Secretary Ickes in his capacity as Public Work Administrator. As a result a building permit issued to Adolf Goebel Co., which operates the slaughterhouse near Benning road and Kenilworth avenue northeast, has been held up.

The abattoir has been in operation for more than 20 years. Because Goebel now proposes to enlarge its operations, the protest has come from Secretary Ickes because of proximity of a low-cost housing development on Ridge road and Thirty-seventh street northeast.

Objection also has been made by the American Civic Association, of which Frederic A. Delano is chairman.

The plan is being studied from every angle to ascertain whether the extended operations of the slaughterhouse would violate public health or sanitary regulations.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland indicated he would be guided largely by the decision of the Bureau of Animal Industry, which along with PWA, is studying the matter.

The District Commissioners have instructed J. B. Gordon, sanitary engineer; Capt. Hugh P. Oram, director of inspection; Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel; and Dr. Ruhland to investigate.

By Chanticleer.

La Paree has gone to the stage for its new master of ceremonies—Don Rice. He's just finished an engagement on the vaudeboards and decided it would be nice to renew old acquaintances at La Paree where he has starred before.

For this week's show Toma Genaro, the Long Sisters and d'Arbour and Renee have been held over.

Don't forget that the Sunday night "Skyride" from La Paree, on the airways, features a community sing. Listeners are entertained "on the house" if they send in the three songs receiving the most requests. Last week the tunes were "Margie," "Wait 'Till the Sun Shines, Nellie" and "I Wonder What Became of Sally."

The usual late seasonal opening of the Russian Troika has taken place now—and officially the nightery season is under way. And similarly in the spring, the Troika closes after all others. Last night's opening, for the fifth year, ran true to Troika form with the exception that its show boasted more gypsies than ever faced it before. And with one innovation. The lounge in the lobby. Here, during the winter afternoons, Helen Hamilton plans to serve cocktails—or tea, if you wish. It's a miniature of the Troika at the head of the stairs. Very swank, in streamlined chairs, new murals and a steaming samovar.

Josephine has been making news—bad news, for Maryland Club Gardens management. Josephine (you know, she is the Gardens chimpanzee) managed last week to unlock the padlock that holds her chromium-plated neck chain and dashed upstairs to the office, where nobody happened to be at the moment. Result: the Gardens bookkeeping system is half at hand and half in Josephine's tummy.

Renee Billon, fan-bubble-peacock dancer now headlining things at Cocoanut Gardens, was reared in a strict North Carolina community, sent to a convent and finally ran away from home. It was a short step to Broadway, where Earl Carroll engaged her for a Vanities show. She's been to Europe, danced for royalty and has had her name in lights at some of London's exclusive spots.

Matt Windsor has devised something new to complement his Theater Intime offerings. Its a stage with a background setting for the various moods of the entertainment: a woodland scene of old Russia, quaint street scenes and ephemeral snow scenes of Siberia. Club Volga Boatman shows are presented at 8:30 and midnight each evening. Dancing until 3—and the music begins at 7.

Paul Florenz's Follies are proving to be one of the smartest offerings the Lotus has had in a long time. And they're accustomed to having smart revues at the Fourteenth street spot, too. Al Norton this week is introducing Jackie and Honey Wilson in rhythm dances; Diane and Edwards, acrobatics and adagios and a spot goes to Judy Ellington, songstress with Bill Strickland's Orchestra.

The lovely Alma Metcalf, singing violinist, can lay claim to being one of the most popular entertainers ever to appear at the Shoreham. She'll remind you of a doll of grandmother's days—long, back hair and white skin emphasizing the warm color in her cheeks. Don't forget the straw vote on the election set for the night of the 22.

Eddie Whitsell and his accordian are the current attraction at the Raleigh Hotel . . . First announcement of plans for Halloween night come from the Hi-Hat, where Oscar is turning over a few ideas already. Marion Swanson is singing with the Hawaiian Islanders nightly.

Sidney's music is heard in the Mayflower's lounge until 7 and after 10 daily. You'll find the debs there . . . Phone Louis for reservations at Griffith Farms, just beyond the District line on the Marlboro pike.

Fan-Dancing Renee Villon and the Grove's Chorus

Tank Crushes Man to Death On U. S. Project

The jinx that has pursued recent Government construction work in the District struck again yesterday when a 4,100-pound fuel tank being installed in the new Library of Congress annex snapped its supporting rope, crushing a workman to death and seriously injuring another.

The accident occurred as the men were about to lower the tank into its place in the annex basement, police said. The hole was too small for the tank. As the men were about to enlarge it, the rope broke and the tank crashed on them.

Norma Shearer Suffers Attack of Pneumonia

Dr. Verne R. Mason, her physician, said Miss Shearer had been ill two weeks and that her condition was "satisfactory." Thalberg died of lobar pneumonia only a month ago.

Mount Asama Erupts; Ashes Hurled 40 Miles

Stall Napper Jailed.

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 15 (A.P.).—Peter Marlboro was sentenced to six months in the Middlesex County Workhouse today for turning a cow out of her stall so he could sleep there himself. Andrew Strecked, owner of the cow brought the charge.

On the Air Today

Another challenge to the listener who feels that radio offers nothing but hot-cha and foolishness is thrown by the Columbia network today when the first of a series of broadcasts by the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra is to be heard through WJSV. The period is from 2:45 to 4:30.

Eugene Goossens will direct the season's offerings, including five children's concerts to be heard between November 10 and April 13. Soloists will include Simon Burer, pianist; Igor Piatigorsky, Russian pianist; Joseph Szigeti, violinist; E. Robert Schmitz, pianist; Guiomar Novaes, Brazilian pianist; Charles M. Courboin, organist, and many others.

Informal intermission talks on music will be given by Theo Ganon, manager of the orchestra. All broadcasts are arranged through the Cincinnati Institute of Fine Arts.

Today's opening concert will offer Weber's overture to "Der Freischutz." Brahms Symphony No. 1 in C minor and Sibelius' tone poem, "En Saga." There will be no soloist for the inaugural program.

Other features:

Joseph M. Marshall, Better Business Bureau director, talks on "Oil Royalties," WRC, 12:45.

Daughters of the American Revolution, begins series at WRC, 2:15, with Mrs. Carl Fenning, Twentieth Century Club president.

Walter O'Keefe—Who stars in his new program Saturday night, does a preview in "Court of Honor," with Lucy Monroe, WMAL, at 10.

Joe Rines and his orchestra, with Morton Bowe and Mabel Albertson, will be starred in a new show, "Dress Rehearsal," beginning November 1. From advance publicity this appears to be a revival of the periodical radio show based on the "behind the scenes" atmosphere of broadcasting. The show will take the listener to an actual "dress rehearsal" (so to speak) with much informal comedy to be developed around the situation. Miss Albertson will be remembered as Phil Baker's leading woman some years back.

According to Time Magazine, the White House has relented on impersonations of the President's voice in the air's "March of Time" and beginning last night with the inaugural of the new weekly "Time" broadcasts, Bill Adams was again heard in his role of Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Some listeners say he does the job better than the President himself. In fact, that is more or less substantiated by action of the White House itself almost three years ago. It was on January 12, 1934, that Assistant Secretary Stephen Early requested that the President's voice no longer be imitated in "Time" broadcasts. He pointed out that since the White House felt unable to give general permission for the simulation of Mr. Roosevelt's voice, it was unfair to make exception in favor of "March of Time." It was pointed out that Adams' job was so faithful that many listeners thought the President was speaking—until the characterization was over.

With the President again a candidate, "March of Time" felt that listeners should hear the simulations of his voice along that of his rivals for office, and withdrawal of the order came as a result of a request to the White House.

For my part, I can recommend Elliot Roosevelt, who made a speech via Columbia, from Iowa not so long ago, as the best impersonation of his distinguished father's voice. The resemblance at times was remarkable.

Miss Brown Loses Match On 19th

By Dave Herman.

Elkridge Hunt Club, Baltimore, Oct. 15.—Two roommates, 18-year-old Marion Brown, of Manor Club, and 19-year-old Lily Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., met today in the semifinals of the Middle Atlantic women's golf championship, and the little Virginia champion triumphed after a stirring 19-hole battle.

Miss Harper, finalist in the championship two years ago, medalist last year and cosharer of the medal this week with Mrs. Betty Meckley, eliminated the Washington girl with a spectacular birdie four on the extra hole.

Miss Harper's victory was made possible by a magnificent iron recovery on her third shot which she played high over trees onto the nineteenth green. One deft stroke of her putter which sent the ball spinning into the cup from 15 feet clinched the match.

After half-topping her third shot on the nineteenth, Miss Brown played a brilliant run-up shot to within a few feet of the pin for a sure par drive, but it availed her nothing in the face of that hope-blasting putt executed by Miss Harper.

Faces Mrs. Morrow Today.

It was Miss Harper's second extra-hole match in as many days. Yesterday she achieved a par three to defeat Schluderbarg, of Baltimore, to win on the twenty-third hole.

Miss Harper will meet Mrs. E. Boyd Morrow, of Elkridge, tomorrow morning in the 18-hole finals. Mrs. Morrow, winner several times of the Middle-Atlantic crown, today showed hitting power in removing Elizabeth Janney, of Green Spring Valley, 5 and 3.

Miss Brown was 2 shots better than Lily for the 18 holes, 1 for the 19, having 42-42—84 as compared to Miss Harper's 44-42—86.

Mrs. C. E. Stewart, Baltimore, defeated Mrs. Landra B. Platt, of Chevy Chase, 4 and 3, in the first flight consolations, and Mrs. Bishop Hill, Chevy Chase, entered the second flight finals by eliminating Mrs. H. C. Trace, of Rodgers Forge, 4 and 3. Mrs. J. T. Powell, Manor, lost to Mrs. W. Lines, Baltimore, in the second flight consolations.

Wilson Eleven Makes Debut Today

A team without a field, Woodrow Wilson High's first football eleven is nevertheless well prepared for the school's first football game. Today the Tigers play St. Alban's Prep on the St. Alban's field, and the gridiron sport will be launched officially for Washington's sixth high school.

Not until Congress sees fit to appropriate the money will Woodrow Wilson have an athletic field, so the football squad has been taking its workouts at Alice Deal Junior High. But mere lack of a field has failed to dampen the sprits of either the Wilson team or Wilson students.

Cheer leaders have already been elected and from the interest in the team you would think the school had a 50-year football tradition behind it. As a matter of fact, it is probably as much fun getting a school started in a sport as keeping it started.

Quietly but effectively, Coach Carl E. Heintell, former end at Lafayette, has taken a squad of some 40 boys and proceeded to mold a team out of the greenest of green material. Some coaches bemoan lack of experienced material available in the fall, but they never were up against a proposition like Heintell's.

None of the boys had ever played school football before and a good share of the squad knew as much about football as they did about their Latin, which isn't a great deal. The coach called upon his wealth of experience, however, whipped the squad into shape mentally and physically and now has so many promising young men battling for every position that he isn't sure of his starting lineup.

"Maybe a few hours before the game," he said, "I'll have some idea of a line-up, but they're all putting up such a fight to make it and so many of them look good that it's going to be tough to pick a team."

The red-headed coach has scheduled only four games this season, but is anxious to list one more. Friends School, Landon Prep and Bullis Prep will be met in the next three weeks. Next year the Tigers will be in the thick of the fight for the inter-high championship. The school will make its inter-high series debut this winter in basketball.

The game with St. Alban's, one of the strongest prep school teams in the Capital area, has created a boom of excitement among the student body and pep-fests have been scheduled for the 11 a. m. assemblies.

Bucknell Alumni Plan Dinner Meeting Today

Bucknell University alumni of Washington, Maryland and Virginia will hold their fall dinner meeting at the New Colonial Hotel tonight at 7:30, Dr. Joseph P. Shearer, president of the Washington association, announced today. The meeting will be a dinner and rally for Bucknellians prior to the Georgetown-Bucknell football game Saturday afternoon in Griffith Stadium.

No. 70682 Says Teams in Pen Seldom Forfeit

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 15 (AP).—The Ohio Penitentiary news sports editor (he's No. 70682) rounded up the prison baseball season in today's issue—and it was a great season for the boys.

No. 70682 figured that 1,165 of the 3,932 inmates took part, that 794 scheduled games were played, and that most of the glory should go to the umpires. He could not refrain from making one facetious remark: "Only one regularly scheduled game was forfeited, the teams always being on hand."

Tarheels Can't Build a Bonfire In Times Square

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—Sad news for the boys of North Carolina University:

You can't have your bonfire in Times Square because Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine will not hear of it.

North Carolina and New York University are playing football in Yankee Stadium on Saturday and Students' Union Director Ivy wrote to Mayor F. H. LaGuardia asking whether it would be permissible to have a rally and bonfire in Times Square.

"Razzle-Dazzle" Play Defended by Schmidt

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 15.—Coach Francis A. Schmidt and 38 of his Ohio State gridders left tonight for Chicago for Saturday's opening Big Ten contest with Northwestern, but before departing the big Texan took a few minutes to defend his "razzle-dazzle" offense.

The "razzle-dazzle versus fundamentalism on the gridiron" argument has raged since last Saturday, when Pittsburgh, through sheer power, defeated the Bucks, 6 to 0. The Panther did not throw a pass and completely bottled up all Ohio attempts to take to the air.

Schmidt objected to the remarks of various "experts," who interpreted the Pitt victory as meaning that the lateral pass is done forever as a football weapon, and that power, and power alone, is the big factor in winning.

"There's no sense going through a brick wall if you have an open gate in front of you," Schmidt said.

The Ohio coach contended that balance and a mixed offense is best in the long run, and that both power and deception are necessary.

"Of course I believe in a strong running attack," he added. "That's fundamental football. Any team that has a good running attack is in a much better position to try other things, too, because the defense can't concentrate on stopping any one type of game. It's possible with a seven-man line to stop open play by other tactics, but if a team has an added threat of 'something different' with whatever type of game it plays, it's almost unstoppable. Only when one team has a pronounced physical advantage and is able to keep hammering until something gives, is it possible to depend solely on power. Personally I don't like that kind of football.

"One thing a lot of critics of the more open style of football overlook is that the kind of football they call 'razzle-dazzle' is fundamentally sound. It involves all the football A B C's such as good blocking, good ball-handling and alertness, and the mere fact that some men who might be blocking lurk in the background occasionally does not mean that they are 'lateral crazy.' In each instance they are there for a purpose, sometimes as decoys."

Schmidt said he would like to have more power on his Buckeye team, but that it was impossible so long as his backs were are small as the present crop.

Old Dominion Dog Show Is Tomorrow

The Old Dominion Kennel Club will hold its second annual and biggest all-breed show tomorrow in Alexandria.

Over 450 entries have been received, representing 63 breeds, which ranks it with the largest dog shows in the East.

The show opens at 9 a. m. Judging starts at 10 and continues to 10 p. m. Cash prizes, silver plate and ribbons will be awarded in all classes. This is the first show in this region under the direction of the Bow Dog Show organization.

Judges selected for the exhibition include some of the most outstanding in the country, one of them coming from Texas to judge.

Dr. March Quits Pro Football Post

New York, Oct. 15 (AP).—The resignation of Dr. Harry A. March, of New York, as president of the American Professional Football League was announced today by league headquarters.

At the same time Dr. March, in a brief statement, said he was resigning "over a matter of policy."

Dressen Signs to Pilot Reds for Single Year

Cincinnati, Oct. 15 (AP).—Charles "Chuck" Dressen signed a one-year contract today to continue as manager of the Cincinnati Reds Baseball Club.

Warren Giles, newly appointed general manager, announced the fiery little manager had been given a raise in salary in appreciation of his success in two years in boosting the Reds from eighth place to fifth in the National League. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Alvin Karpis' Dog Wins Blue Ribbon in Show

Mrs. Karpis, who operates a hotel here and said she married the outlaw in 1935, entered the animal in the dog show. As photographers snapped his pictures, she announced she would send one to the owner.

Md. Game Seen As Crisis for Cavaliers

Victory Over Terps May Presage Successful Grid Season.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 15.—Virginia's unhurried, but clearly visible movement directed at a return to football prowess, quickened by a sprinkling of sophomoric material among veteran campaigners, probably will meet the biggest test of the season against Maryland here Saturday in the university's "Commonwealth of Virginia Day" game.

The Cavaliers have made a start that looks better than all of last season, and if they can keep their stride, or rather step it up, against the Old Liners, they will be on their way to the most successful season in the last decade. A victory over Maryland would set the stage for one or two more major conquests.

But Coach Tebell's boys will have to play 60 minutes of hard, smart football to hold the Old Line backfield in check, a backfield packed with more power and versatility than can be mustered on but few college squads in this section. In addition to Guckeyson, Headley, Ellinger and Gormley, who pounded out a 14-to-7 victory over the Cavaliers last year, Virginia will have to withstand the running, passing and kicking of Jim Meade, Maryland's brilliant sophomore star.

Same Men on Line.

The same seven linemen who started the last two games will attempt to stem the Maryland tide. They are Steve Davenport and Woody George, ends; Billy Weeks and Sanford Haskell, tackles; Ray Schmidt and Conway Moncure, guards, and Al Berkeley, center.

Capt. Harry Martin, who probably will be rated as the finest Cavalier leader in recent years, is slated to assume the heaviest load in quarterbacking the team, and take over most of the passing, plunging and kicking. Martin has played all but two minutes of the three games to date.

More than 100 State officials, including most of Gov. Peery's staff, departmental heads and members of the General Assembly will be guests of the university for the game and other informal exercises.

Navy Finishes Work For Battle With Yale

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 15.—The secrecy which has shrouded the training of the Navy football squad for the Yale game was relaxed today as Tom Hamilton, head coach, put the players through their last hard workout.

All spectators were kept from the field earlier in the week as the squad went through a long offensive drill, followed by defensive training. Today those holding credentials from Lieut. Comdr. Andrew C. McFall, graduate manager of athletics, were allowed to see the practice.

Hamilton spent the practice period in a mixed offensive and defensive drill, including dummy scrimmage and the running of plays. Tomorrow the usual light pre-game routine will prevail, with attention paid to timing and polishing of plays.

Middies to See Game.

The approximately 2,200 midshipmen who will journey to the Baltimore Stadium Saturday to cheer the team, are gripped with football spirit and the usual big game atmosphere has taken possession of the Naval Academy.

A preliminary Navy-Yale clash will occur here tomorrow when the junior varsities of the two institutions will meet on the academy field.

At the office of the Navy Athletic Association a force of clerks is busy handling the demand for tickets. Approximately 22,000 have been sold and requests are coming in fast. In order to speed up the sale of tickets at the stadium on Saturday the Navy will move two of its ticket booths to Baltimore.

Scouts who have seen Yale in action forecast a ground-gaining duel between Charlie Ewart, of Yale and Sneed Schmidt, of Navy. They compare Ewart to Monk Meyer, Army's great back, and feel that Schmidt, the Navy's triple threat and ace open field running, will be spurred by the competition.

Schmidt also will be called upon to match the punting of Dave Colwell, Yale's fullback. Both are good distance punters and are equally skilled in shots to the coffin corner.

If Irwin Fike, Navy end, gets in the game with Archie Soucek, his running mate, spectators will see another duel between the Navy wingmen and Capt. Larry Kelly, who has been a fixture at right end for Yale since he was a sophomore.

The Yale squad consisting of 61 players will leave New Haven, Conn., tomorrow morning for Baltimore, on a special train consisting of three coaches and a diner. It will be the longest trip a Yale football team has made since 1931 when Albie Booth's team played Chicago.

Arriving in Baltimore shortly after 1 p. m., the squad will be split, the varsity going to the stadium to practice, and the junior varsity coming here to play the Navy B squad.

The Yale varsity squad will be quartered at the Gilman School, Baltimore, tomorrow and Saturday nights. The official Yale party will be at the Lord Baltimore Hotel, Baltimore.

2 Ex-Teammates Face Each Other In Yale-Navy Tilt

Woodberry Forest, Va., Oct. 15 (AP). When the football teams of Yale and Navy meet at Baltimore on Saturday in the East's football classic, two former teammates at Woodberry Forest school will in all probability be called on for service in opposing ranks.

Meredith L. ("Merry") Scott, Bulldog tackle, and William B. ("Billy") Mason, Middy back, both natives of Orange County, Va., played at Woodberry throughout the seasons of 1931 and 1932, the latter year on an undefeated team that won the Virginia prep school championship.

20,000 Expected to See Aerial Battle Tonight With Tough Invaders

By Lewis F. Atchison.

An attendance of 20,000 fans is expected for the game if good weather conditions prevail, which will be a new high mark for the season. The advance ticket sale has been unusually brisk.

Big and strong physically, and downright cocky mentally, the Porkers appear to be a tough bunch of hombres on the football field. They debarked as fresh as a bouquet of daisies and minus train-legs, probably a result of their workout in Cincinnati Wednesday night. In practice they strongly resembled the Alabama squad of last year, which slaughtered the Colonials, 39-0, but it is doubtful if they can turn on as much heat as the Crimson Tide.

Nominally an even-money choice on a basis of its three past performances, which have netted them two victories and a scoreless tie without being scored on, George Washington, nevertheless, is on the long end of 7-to-5 odds. Most Colonial supporters, however, are demanding one touchdown on an even-money waver, and in some instances, two touchdowns.

Passes Are Potent.

The absence of Jack Robbins, Arkansas' ace passer, who will not play because of a sprained ankle, but who is with the team, helped lower the odds on the Southwesterners, but failed to dislodge them as favorites. Robbins was out of action last week when the visitors met and defeated Baylor, 18 to 14, in a sensational conference game.

The Porkers, while rarely heard of outside of their own conference, possess one of the flashiest aerial games in the country. In their first three games they threw 105 passes and completed 45 for a total gain of 650 yards. Nine have gone for touchdowns—two providing the winning margin against Baylor last week.

In Jim Benton and Ray Hamilton, will see a couple of potential all-Americans and a pair of ends rated without peer in the Southwest. Their play in the first three games was nothing short of sensational, offensively and defensively. The team is strongest at the wings, and weakest at one guard and another tackle. The exact location of these weak links is George Washington's problem.

Interest Is Keen.

Never before in the school's history has interest and spirit been at such a high pitch as it is this season and especially for this game. Elated at their representatives' previous success the student body and alumni has rallied to the cause with a gusto and the team will not want for moral and vocal support tonight.

Coach Jim Pixlee has groomed his squad carefully for this game and is prepared to bring out a bagful of tricks that were kept under cover last week because of poor

Stuhldreher, Layden Foes For First Time

By the United Press.

New York, Oct. 15.—It is New Year's Day, 1925. The Rose Bowl is filled with 53,000 spectators who come to see two great football teams play—mighty Stanford, led by bone-crushing Ernie Nevers, and Notre Dame, featuring the "Four Horsemen."

Stanford pushes the Irish up and down the field. But Notre Dame wins, 23-10, thanks to three touchdowns by Elmer Layden. The way to those scores is cleared for the 165-pound fullback by Quarterback Harry Stuhldreher.

That was the last time the horsemen galloped together. In the 12-year span since their last ride, the horsemen have gone on to brilliant coaching careers. Only one of them now is on the sidelines—Don Miller, who became a lawyer at Columbus, Ohio, after being assistant coach at Georgia Tech.

Teams Have Never Met.

In all those years teams coached by members of that immortal backfield never have met. This Saturday, on the same Indiana turf where they wrote gridiron history, the meeting finally will occur.

Layden, the runner, now coach at Notre Dame, faces Stuhldreher, the blocker, who will sit on the other side of the field on the Wisconsin bench. And Layden is favored to defeat his old running mate.

Stuhldreher and Layden were coaching neighbors until 1934. Harry was at Villa Nova and Elmer at Duquesne. Meanwhile, Jimmy Crowley, the other horseman, moved from Michigan State to Fordham.

In 1934, Layden was called back to Notre Dame. And this spring the way for the meeting was paved when Stuhldreher moved up to Wisconsin to recoup the Badgers' depleted football fortunes.

Layden Is Favored.

Saturday's game will be the "rubber" meeting between the schools. In the nine times they have met, each team has won four. The other game ended in a tie.

Should Wisconsin win—and the odds are heavily against such an upset—it would mark the fourth time in two years Layden has lost to a first-year coach. Elmer started his South Bend career with a 7-6 defeat by another Notre Damer, Jack Chevigny, of Texas. The same year, Lieut. Tom Hamilton, of Navy, scored 10-6 over the Irish, and Lynn Waldorf, of Northwestern, turned in the third first-year triumph last season with a surprise 14-7 victory the week after Notre Dame had scored its amazing last period victory over Ohio State.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Laurel, Md., Oct. 15.—Ridden by the fashionable apprentice jockey, Hubert le Blanc, Suncrax survived a gruelling front-running effort to emerge the winner in a blanket finish that brought the camera into action to aid the judges. The picture showed that she had won her third race of the year in seventeen starts by a margin of a head from the Brandon Stable's Tonianna, with Veiled Lady third, a like margin away.

Suncrax, the property of Mrs. Colin MacLeod, was well played in the open betting feature and rewarded the faithful with a $10 mutuel. She stepped the mile route in 1:40 over a fast track.

The contest drew a field of nine ambitious juveniles and after a brief period at the post, Suncrax bounded to the front. She was hard urged to become a definite leader as the field swung into the backstretch. At that point Le Blanc steadied her along, saving ground, while Tonianna and Fond Memories came up, almost abreast of her.

Approaching the stretch, Suncrax appeared to be drawing away, but Tonianna rallied to fight it out and the pair struggled through the stretch. Nearing the wire, Veiled Lady developed a rush and the three jumped for the wire virtually together.

Despite sagging skies only a slight drizzle had marked the afternoon up to the running of the feature. A crowd of 9,000 was on hand.

E. K. Bryson's Spartan Lady, in the role of a $4.10 favorite, took the sixth race by a head from Mrs. J. Bowes Bond's Jakovia. Third money in the cheap field of 10 went to Mrs. M. Eslick's Sir Kai. Spartan Lady was within striking distance from the start and came around the leaders in the early stretch to be up in the final 20 yards. Jakovia and Sir Kai had a private battle for pace-setting honors that took something out of them. The winner was clocked in 1:45 for the mile.

Le Blanc Wins Third.

Apprentice Jockey Le Blanc rode his third winner of the day astride Stubby Scamp, owned by Mrs. J. Bosley, jr. The Sea Scamp gelding had a length margin over Wandrel, the favorite, at the end of the mile and a furlong battle. Flying Falcon took third money. The winner was in front all the way and paid a $9.10 mutuel. He ran the route in 1:53.

Maiden fillies, a dozen of them, paraded postward in the opening event and the 6-furlong dash proved a romp for Leo J. Marks' Millie M., ridden by Jockey Bobby Merritt. The Cohort filly had a margin of three lengths over Mrs. R. A. Van Clief's Melodiana which, in turn, led Walter M. Jeffords' Rouge et Noir to the finish by four lengths.

Millie M. shook off Blocksod going to the first turn and had things her own way to the end. She was clocked in the good time of 1:12 4-5 and paid a $6.80 mutuel.

Little Marty Wins.

Little Marty, a gelding which lost its rider in its previous outing, had no mishaps today and jumped and ran to victory in the day's steeplechase event over the 2-mile course. Apprentice Jockey J. McGrath was in the saddle and rode a good race. Beaten a half length was Duncan H. Read's Dundrillin with L. C. Leith's Daffy third in the group of 12. Both Little Marty and Daffy were in the betting "field." Little Marty was a forward factor from the start and took command going to the thirteenth jump but had to be kept to a stout drive to offset the closing rush of Dundrillin. Little Marty returned a $17.40 mutuel and ran the distance in 3:59 3-5.

Iron Ore Pays $13.

The third race, fashioned for cheap sprinters, was decided by the judges with the aid of the camera. Iron Ore was awarded a nose decision over High Torque, with Titian Kiddie also figuring in the blanket finish. The winner, owned by Jefferson Davis Cohn and ridden by Apprentice H. Le Blanc, was up in the final strides after racing or the outside. Iron Ore paid a $13.10 mutuel and was timed in 1:13 2-5.

Miss Fern, tiny filly owned by E. A. Nicademus and carrying only 94 pounds, came with a rush in the stretch to win the fourth race. She took a head decision over Skyride, the latter second by a nose over Atit, a field horse. Miss Fern was handled well by Apprentice Jockey K. McCombs and paid a $13.40 mutuel while running the mile and 70 yards in 1:45 3-5. No Mistake, the favorite, had no excuses in the test.

MILLIE M., sent up on the inside to displace BLACKSOD in the run to the first turn, drew out to a commanding lead, held sway thereafter and was being taken in hand at the finish. MELODIANA came between horses to reach contention and closed willingly, but no match for the winner. ROUGE ET NOIR, away in a tangle along the rail, came with good speed when clear. HAPPY HAZEL gained some ground in the late stages. THE DRUM could not keep up after being forwardly placed. BLACKSOD dropped back steadily after reaching the far turn. TRANSIT BIRD was in tight quarters approaching the stretch.

SECOND RACE—About two miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. Steeplechase. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:59. Off at 2:00. Winner, J. K. Culver, jr.'s b. g. (9), by Lucky Hour—Elizabeth D. Trained by J. P. Jones. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 3:59 3-5 (14 jumps).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE MARTY (field), $17.40, $7.40, $6.90; DUNDRILLIN, $7.00, $4.90; DAFFY (field), $6.90.
LITTLE MARTY, fencing in improved fashion, was under restraint while running in close pursuit of the leaders, rallied to take command when put to a drive and just lasted. DUNDRILLIN worked his way to contention the first time around, came with good speed on the flat after the final fence and was wearing down the winner. DAFFY improved her position steadily during the first mile, loomed menacingly at the twelfth fence, but landed poorly at the next fence. LAW BREAKER, allowed to drop far out of it after being forwardly placed, came with good courage when placed to take drive. POSTMAN HOME, under restraint for a mile, rallied mildly while saving ground in the closing stages. MEREDITH tired after setting the pace. BLUE VISION stopped.

WEATHER, DRIZZLING. TRACK, FAST.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:29½. Off at 2:32½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRON ORE, $13.10, $6.70, $4.30; HIGH TORQUE, $7.00, $4.60; TITIAN KIDDIE (field), $7.40.
IRON ORE, forced to race on the outside throughout, was steadied along after breaking alertly, rallied under good handling in the late stretch to be up in the concluding strides. HIGH TORQUE broke slowly, went between horses to reach contention turning for the stretch and fought it out willingly. TITIAN KIDDIE, off in the first flight, came with good courage in the final test. BALCONY came with a rush at the end. SUNDROPS had good early speed. SUPREME MAIDEN could not keep up. SEA GULL showed a dull effort.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $50.30.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, FAST.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:01½. Off at 3:03½. Winner, E. A. *Field.
Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS FERN, $13.40, $6.00, $4.60; SKYRIDE, $7.90, $4.90; ATIT (field), $4.10.
MISS FERN, excellently handled, was allowed to settle into stride, worked her way to the leaders swinging for the stretch, rallied when placed to a drive and closed full of run. SKYRIDE went to the front under hustling tactics at the break, shook off challenges of ATIT and FORGET NOT to draw clear entering the stretch, but was tiring slowly at the end. ATIT was rushed to the leaders at the first turn, was hard ridden to the finish and closed stoutly. SANDY BELLE came willingly in the final test. NO MISTAKE could not threaten at any stage. DIXIE BEE had good speed for a half. FORGET NOT stopped. MARGE pulled up sore.

FIFTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:36½. Winner, Mrs. C. MacLeod's ch. f. (2), by Sun Edwin—Fiducia. Trained by G. H. Strate. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:40.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUNCRAX, $10.00, $6.30, $4.80; TONIANNA, $11.70, $7.90; VEILED LADY, $5.30.
SUNCRAX sprinted to the front at once, was rated along accompanied by TONIANNA and FOND MEMORY, drew out slightly while stoutly handled midway of the stretch, but had to be kept to drive and just lasted. TONIANNA raced between SUNCRAX and FOND MEMORIES most of the way and fought it out willingly. VEILED LADY, within striking distance from the start while saving ground, came with a belated rush at the finish and was going fastest. FOND MEMORIES rushed up on the outside approaching the far turn to take command briefly and tired gradually thereafter. HI-SWEET went evenly but could not menace. PRAIRIE PRINCE was outrun for six furlongs and came with good courage at the end.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:06. Off at 4:09. Winner, E. K. Bryson's ch. m. (6), by Crusader—Penelope. Trained by H. Baker. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:13 4-5, 1:40 1-5, 1:45.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARTAN LADY, $4.10, $2.70, $2.60; JAKOVIA, $4.10, $3.40; SIR KAI, $4.60.
SPARTAN LADY improved her position steadily along the backstretch, came to the outside for the final drive and wore down JAKOVIA inside the seventh pole. JAKOVIA was hard used running with SIR KAI and was tiring gradually in the late stages. SIR KAI went to the front at the break and began to falter at the stretch turn. HIGH FLAG could not threaten. BALMACAN had speed to the far turn. STEPONIT went wide entering the stretch. POPPYMAN was outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward (foaled in Maryland). Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:36½. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. J. Bosley, jr.'s b. g. (3), by Sea Scamp—Dimlight. Trained by E. Young. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SNOBBY SCAMP, $9.10, $3.30, $2.90; WANDREL, $3.20, $2.70; FLYING FALCON, $3.90.
SNOBBY SCAMP, hustled to the front going to the first turn, shook off challenges of SIT OUT to draw clear, and held WANDREL safe in the closing test. The latter, close to the leaders to the stretch, gained slowly in the final eighth. FLYING FALCON came through on the rail at the final bend and closed willingly. SIT OUT was bothered by HARD CHASE going to the first turn, but tired after chasing the pacesetters. TAUNTON was in tight quarters swinging for the stretch and rallied only mildly. POOP DECK was outrun. HARD CHASE quit.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:08. Off at 5:11. Winner, Mrs. A. L. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEARZIN, $6.50, $3.80, $2.70; IRISH VOTE, $6.40, $3.20; TAMBOV, $2.90.
DEARZIN, steadied along while within striking distance of the leaders, assumed command when placed to a drive inside the eighth pole and barely lasted. IRISH VOTE, closer than usual during the early running, came with a belated rush on the outside and was going fastest of all. TAMBOV went to the front at once, held away to the stretch, but was weakening fast at the end. PENCADER raced wide most of the way and hung in the final drive. Ffamous CLAYTON stopped.

13 Local Scholastic Grid Teams to Play Eight Games Today

TODAY.

Roosevelt vs. Gonzaga, at Roosevelt Stadium, 2:30 p. m.
Woodrow Wilson vs. St. Alban's, at St. Alban's, 2:30 p. m.
Eastern High vs. Calvert Hall, Baltimore.

TOMORROW.

Western vs. Petersburg High, at Petersburg, Va.

By John R. Vosburgh.

If all the schoolboy punts and passes to be committed by Washington teams today were laid end to end, they would probably reach from Central Stadium to Georgetown Prep. When you get 13 local high schools and prep schools involved in one day of football, it means about 250 youths will be hitting the sod or one another.

This sizable battalion, which would be lugging bayonets in many countries, cuts loose on the gridiron today in eight games ranging from the District through Maryland and Virginia. The local games follow:

Friends School vs. Georgetown Prep, at Garrett Park.

Wilson Makes Debut.

In addition to these five attractions, Eastern High will be playing Calvert Hall in Baltimore, Landon Prep meets St. Paul's School, also in Baltimore and Washington-Lee High, from just across the river, meets Handley High in Winchester, Va. On the morrow, Western High plays the tough Petersburg (Va.) High eleven at Petersburg.

Of the local games, the Woodrow Wilson-St. Alban's game holds probably the most significance. It will be the first football game in Wilson's history and takes it against one of the strongest prep schools of the surrounding area.

Bearing more importantly, however, on the forthcoming inter-high series will be the Roosevelt-Gonzaga conflict. Gonzaga has already played Central, Eastern and Tech and Roosevelt's showing against the Purple will do much to stamp its rating in the series. A strong Bullis Prep team defeated Roosevelt, 14 to 0, a week ago while Gonzaga has lost to Central, 14-0, Eastern, 13-12 and Tech, 31-6. The Rough Riders beat Gonzaga last year, 13 to 6.

Central Is Favored.

Central should swamp St. John's for its third win in four starts while Friends and Georgetown Prep loom as even choices in their annual fray. It will be the first Georgetown Prep game under the coaching regime of Ed Hagarden, former Georgetown All-American basketball star. Friends lost to Tome Institute last week, 13-0.

Devitt meets a powerful National Training School team but should win by a couple of touchdowns. Eastern rates the favorite over Calvert Hall, which it defeated last year, 6 to 0.

One of the strongest Landon Prep teams in years hopes to avenge a 25-0 defeat suffered at the hands of St. Paul's last year. Landon's 13-6 victory over St. Andrew's, of Wilmington, Del., last week broke the latter's 3-year winning streak of some 25 games. Washington-Lee, which beat Handley High, 7-0 last week is rated to win today by no more than that margin.

Chilean Horsemen Greeted by Country's Envoy Here

Dusek Outkicks Olson in Mat Feature

Ernie Dusek booted Cliff Olson into submission at Turner's Arena last night after 38½ minutes of a wrestling match that was full of kicks as an international soccer game or a barload of Sazerac cocktails.

The finish came just after Ernie had picked poor Clifford up by his feet and swung him in a wide circle like an Argentine gaucho swinging a bolo. Dusek let Olson go and Clifford bounced a few times before coming to rest. Dusek tore into him, only to run smack dab into a kick in the face which laid him low.

It was then Olson's turn to attempt to climb aboard Dusek's recumbent frame, but as he headed for the body, Ernie suddenly came to life and kicked poor Clifford smack dab in the digestive department. It was but the work of a second for Ernie to jump on Olson while Referee Cyclone Burns counted the necessary three.

The crowd of 1,800 was given a little more than its money's worth in a post-battle brawl in which Olson attempted to batter Dusek out of the ring. This post-battle brawl ended as do all wrestling post-battle brawls—with the combatants being held apart by ringside attendants.

In a 45-minute semifinal, Nick Campofreda and John Katan struggled to a draw. In preliminaries scheduled for 30 minutes, Stan Sokolis and Jack Hader worked to a draw, Henry Piers flopped Bobbie Roberts and Charlie Allen threw Ed Cook.

Southeast Drills.

The Southeast A. C. wil scrimmage tonight at 7:30 in the Brent schoolyard in preparation for its game Sunday with the Takoma Firemen, at Takoma. Inscoe, Scheible, Bond and Cuozzo are particularly wanted present tonight. The team is seeking games in the 150-pound class. Call Russ Hilderbrand, District 3672, or Lincoln 5896-W.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

No stranger to the Southwest's razzle-dazzle, touch-and-go style of football is George Washington's Jim Pixlee. Amid a mild hysteria among G. W. supporters who have heard tell of Arkansas' aerial circus, its giant pass receivers and its jack-rabbit backs, Mr. Pixlee is maintaining a dignified calm.

POVICH.

Pixlee will know what to expect when Arkansas takes the field at Griffith Stadium tonight against his Colonials. For nigh onto 20 years he himself was part and parcel of Southwest football. A long coaching career in Oklahoma, hard by the Ozarks, stamps Pixlee as a home-bred of the Southwest. He knows every strong point, every foible of Southwest football.

"And it's not the best kind of football," Pixlee was telling this department. "You can't play that kind of football and get away with it consistently. A team can't develop those trick offensives unless it overlooks its own defense, and the team with power plays is a better team.

"There's a way to beat these Southwest teams. You can't outscore 'em at that wide-open business; they'll run circles around you. You can't beat 'em at their own game. You've got to rush that ball right down their throats. We may try some wide-open stuff tonight, but it will be only to open 'em up. We're going to hang onto that ball and pound at 'em and we'll see how they can take it."

The efficacy of what appears to be Pixlee's strategy was strikingly illustrated last Saturday in New York where Fordham beat a Southern Methodist team that was the best example of Southwest football. Not a single pass did Fordham attempt while Southern Methodist darkened the air with aerials. Finally a Southern Methodist pass boomeranged, and Fordham had the lone touchdown of the game on an interception.

Tonight, Pixlee will be unveiling his George Washington team for its first real test of the season. That baptism under fire was originally scheduled for last week when the rugged Mississippi team was met at Griffith Stadium, but a muddy field made a farce of all attempts to appraise the G. W. squad. In the mud, all the niceties of co-ordination and precision were lost.

There was no mistaking, though, the new-found fire on the Colonials' squad. Four times G. W. hurled back assaults by Ole Miss deep in scoring territory and each time the Colonials mustered force for a counter-attack. Claims of the G. W. press agent that George Washington this year is a spirited eleven appeared to be true.

Even in the absence of Tuffy Leemans, the Colonials appear to be a better football team than the 1935 crew. Deep down, G. W. coaches acknowledge that Leemans' brilliance dimmed the stars of other performers on the team. Leemans won all the headlines and midweek press notices, and there was a disposition to "let Leemans do it."

No reflection on the character of Leemans was the oft-times lackadaisical support of his teammates. It was merely the natural reaction of his fame setting in among a group of lads who, in a losing season, doubtless were surfeited with Leemans' fame.

No one G. W. player towers among the rest this season. Blessed with a wide-open fight for jobs on the team, G. W. coaches are able to play one lad against the other, to draw from each his absolute best. Competition has made for a new fight, a new spirit on the squad which this year is young and eager in contrast to the maturity of former G. W. teams. Any coach will tell you that's worth as much as a fifth down.

Eagles Improved For St. John's Tilt

A vastly improved American University team will journey to Annapolis tomorrow for its annual game with St. John's College. No less an authority than Walter Young, Eagle coach, is the author of the statement, and he apparently has good reason to be enthusiastic.

In the first place, Hal Toner and Jack Rhodes are giving the club a better brand of punting than it has enjoyed in a long time, and in the second place, Young has a plentiful supply of backfield talent available. He intends to alternate two sets of backs throughout the duel, hoping to wear down the Johnnies' defense.

The hottest fight on the squad at this time involves Joe Britton and Sammy Maize, both veterans, who are disputing one another's claim to the regular center position, an encouraging sign. The Eagles will match their opponents pound for pound at every position but end.

National City League.

National City League games in the 150-pound class this week will be played in Maryland and Virginia. At Seat Pleasant, Md., the Palace Athletic Club will play the Trinity Athletic Club, and at Ballston, Va., the Regal Clothing eleven clashes with the Arlington Athletic Club. Both games start at 2:30 p. m.

Grid Game Wanted.

Washington Pros Set For Battle With Celtics

The Washington Pros climaxed a hard week of practice for Sunday's Dixie League game with the Alexandria Celtics with a two-hour workout last night at Duffy Stadium, Seat Pleasant. The squad is at its best, physically and is confident of turning back its neighboring rival.

Avid exponents of forward and lateral passes, the Pros have planned a wide-open game with Dick Nelson doing most of the passing. Willis Benner, Murray Kanner and Dick McGann probably will be on the receiving end of the aerials. In three games the team has thrown 32 laterals and completed 25 for a total gain of 230 yards.

Sunday Game Wanted.

The Mount Rainier 135-pound football team would like to book a Sunday gabe to be played at the Mount Rainier High School. Please call Greenwood 1501.

Johnson Beats McCarthy in Club Golf

Paul Frizzell, Laudick and Stevinson Also Enter Columbia Semifinal.

Finishing with a blast of subpar golf, Harvey Johnson, 18-year-old defending champion, eliminated Martin F. McCarthy, 1 up yesterday to enter the semfinals of the Country Club championship.

McCarthy had Johnson, 2 down at the turn, and was 2 up at the fifteenth. Johnson won three of the next four holes with a 1-under-par performance scoring at birdie on the seventeenth. The champion shot a 73.

Paul Frizzell put out E. L. Bono, 1 up, and Lou Laudick defeated G. M. Ferris on the nineteenth hole when the latter three-putted. Miller B. Stevinson, six-time champion, won easily from John L. Barr. Results:

First Flight.

P. J. Frizzell defeated E. L. Bono, 1 up; Miller B. Stevinson defeated J. L. Barr, 7 and 6; Lou Laudick defeated G. M. Ferris, 1 up, 19 holes; Harvey Johnson defeated Martin F. McCarthy, 1 up.

Consolation—H. K. Cornwell, W. W. Hinshaw and Ed Merkle won defaults; Craig McKee defeated Luther C. Steward, jr., 2 and 1.

Cards Will Beat De Paul, Says Bergman

It will be a repentant and vicious Catholic University team that faces De Paul tomorrow afternoon at Brookland in the second intersectional fray between the two, and, taking Coach "Dutch" Bergman's word for it, his boys are going to skin the Wildcats alive. The Cards are seeking revenge for a 9-6 setback received at De Paul's hands last year and are favorites to do it.

Watching his boys gamboling on the stadium greensward yesterday afternoon just before practice, Bergman relieved himself of the opinion that De Paul won't get within telegraphic distance of the Cardinals' goal line, much less score or upset them.

"Why," he said, "that La Salle game was the best thing that ever happened to this team and the worst break De Paul could have gotten. We're gunning for this outfit anyway, and after that close shave (with La Salle) these kids know they've got to get in there and keep fighting every minute. As far as they're concerned the season will be a complete success if they whip De Paul—even if they lose all the rest."

Foley Is Inured.

"Irish" Carroll, star of the troupe, or Burke Vidnovic, his sophomore understudy, will occupy the featured offensive role tomorrow with "Spec" Foley out of the game. Foley is nursing an injured shoulder and probably will not be available until the Loyola game two weeks hence. Bergman denied that he was benched because of his work against La Salle, and "Spec" was not in uniform yesterday.

Carroll or Vidnovic will do the punting in Foley's absence, although Makofske, the southpaw booter, will be available should the occasion arise. All three have been hitting the ball well in practice and this phase of the attack should not suffer by their efforts.

The squad spent most of yesterday afternoon looking over De Paul's passing plays in dummy scrimmage, and it saw plenty. The Cats have every conceivable type of play for their aerial game, and undoubtedly will make good use of them tomorrow.

Hecht Co. Bowlers Lose League Lead

The standings of the teams in the Department Store League underwent a considerable change last night at the Recreation drives with Woodward & Lothrop supplanting Hecht Co. at the top of the heap as the result of a three-game walloping administered to Raleigh Haberdashers.

Lansburgh & Brothers gained a sweet three-game victory over Hecht Co., knocking them out of the No. 1 hole with three former Hechtmen in their line-up. S. Kann Sons Co., defending champions, eked out an odd-game decision over William Hahn & Co., and Jelleffs and Credit Bureau each took two games from Guy-Curran and Palais Royal, respectively.

Secretary Irwin Simon's 371, McDonald's 361 and Bowman's 355 were tops for the individual efforts.

Ceil Whitaker, of Agriculture, carried away the individual honors in the Ladies Federal League at Arcadia with a 125 game and 326 set. Three A's 528 and Treasury No. 2's 1,475 were the best team scores.

Transportation Team, No. 1, furnished the highlights in the War Department Men's League with 582 and 1,637. Dabney (Auditor) and Curtin (Frankies) shared individual honors with 145 and 379, respectively.

Mary Doyle (North) and Helen Cunadi (Columbia), shared the spotlight in the C. & P. Telephone League, the former annexing top game with 109, and the latter chalking up a 303 total for top set. General Office lead the team scoring with 478 and 1,369.

Hagerty to Depend on Aerials Against Heavy Bucknell Team

Mr. John L. Hagerty, professor of football at Georgetown, got down to figures yesterday, the figures of Bucknell's bulky linesmen, and forthright decided that tomorrow will be the time for all good pass pitchers and receivers to come to the aid of the Hoyas. Mr. Hagerty discovered that Bucknell will average 197 pounds in its seven-man wing spread, outweighing the Hoyas by considerably more than the Hoyas care to be outweighed.

Thus, Hagerty doing more figuring and getting the correct solution, decided that the better part of valor, where big lines are concerned, is to go around or over them. Tomorrow his boys will try going over, using the Keating, Keegin, Dooley and Valliquette Airlines, Inc., as a mode of transportation. Keating will pilot the cowhide and the others will pick it up in mid-air—they hope.

Georgetown was the passingest team in this neck of the woods last season, throwing more forwards and laterals than any two teams combined, and usually making connections for goodly gains. It is still a passing outfit, only there was no need to pass against Delaware and it virtually was impossible to do so in the mud against Cincinnati. A lateral, however, tossed by Keating and caught by Dooley, gave the Hoyas their margin of victory over the Bearcats.

By the Associated Press.

The total was $4,636,786,000 against $4,968,034,000 in the corresponding week last year, a drop of 6.7 per cent. In the preceding week, which included heavy payments around the start of the month, there was a year-to-year increase of 26.2 per cent.

New York City clearings were off 12 per cent, totaling $2,789,521,000, against $3,168,372,000. For the other cities a net increase of 2.6 per cent was recorded. The total was $1,847,265,000, against $1,799,662,000 in the 1935 week.

The Washington Clearing House reports total clearings of $22,522,969.46 for the week ended October 14, which compares with $20,879,924.94 for the corresponding period last year, an increase of 7.86 per cent. Compared with a total of $27,428,462.72 for the previous week, clearings decreased 17.8 per cent.

London Brokers Faint In Stock Scramble

London, Oct. 15 (AP).—Three brokers fainted and were carried from the floor of the London Stock Exchange today during wild scenes attending a rush of buyers for Morris Motors, Ltd., 5-shilling shares, listing of which was effective this morning.

More than 1,500 brokers and clerks were involved in the buying rush which, for a time, seriously interfered with the other business of the exchange.

$29,000,000 U. S. Steel Plan In Birmingham

By the Associated Press.

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 15.—Coupled with a statement by Chairman Myron C. Taylor that "happily the tide has turned—the rhythm of recovery has been established" the United States Steel Corporation announced today an expansion program—estimated at $29,000,000 in the Birmingham district.

The announcement of the building program, which will add several new plants including a tin mill and provide employment for 2,500 when completed, was announced by William A. Irvin, president of the steel corporation, at a luncheon meeting of industrialists and business men.

Irvin did not estimate the cost of the expansion program of its Birmingham subsidiary, the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., but sources close to the latter set the figure at $29,000,000. Construction will start at once, he said.

Wheat Prices Decline With Australia Rain

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—Indicated breakup of the drought that has long been severely handicapping crop prospects in Australia tumbled wheat prices down 1⅝ cents a bushel today. With improvement of prospects for Southern Hemisphere crops, a pause in export purchases of Canadian wheat formed an outstanding feature, the total today being estimated at only 400,000 bushels.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Irregular in Moderately Heavier Trading; Bonds Higher; Wheat Prices Lower.

New York, Oct. 15.—Stocks moved irregularly in moderately heavier trading, the turnover rising to a total of 1,785,000 shares. Bonds were higher in nearly all departments. December wheat closed ⅞ of a cent lower at 116 cents a bushel.

Railroad shares occupied a good share of the market's attention, and notwithstanding rising car loadings and earnings, the majority lost ground. Santa Fe gave up yesterday's gain of a point. Baltimore & Ohio, the subject of irresponsible stories, was especially soft. The preferred dipped more than two points. Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Southern Railway receded fractionally. Nickel Plate fell 2 points, but Pennsylvania climbed a fraction to a new high price. New York Central was firm. Nashville Chattanooga maintained its strong tone.

Motors and steels hardened with smaller volume and narrow price movements. Little change could be found among the oils, utilities, motor accessories, chemicals and foods. Amusement shares were among the most active. The various classes of Paramount gained 1 to 5 points. Warner, Radio and Loew's stiffened. A good deal of substance is contained in the report that work has gone a good way toward an R. F. C. reorganization plan.

Metal Shares Rise.

Metal shares were a feature of the dealings. A higher export price for copper was announced and that stimulated the London market for copper shares, with favorable repercussions here. The market here feels there still is a good deal of opposition in one section of the copper industry to an increase in the domestic price of the metal.

Silver shares were unusually active and strong, without anything in the news available to the general public to account for the movement. American Smelting and Cerro de Pasco reached new high prices on 2 to 3 point gains. Anaconda led the coppers. Roan Antelope leaped 3 points on one sale.

Over the rest of the board only a handful of stocks drew attention. In rising half a dozen points Mengel preferred reached its best price since 1930. Dividends were suspended in 1931 and arrears now total $35 a share. Remington Rand, Electric Boat and Schenley were strong. Farm implements held firm. Westinghouse gave up 2 points. McKeesport lost more than 3 points. Sears Roebuck softened. General Electric was indifferent to a good earnings statement.

Returning Confidence.

Business news was scarce, but some stiffening of sentiment was expected to follow publication, after the market, of Myron C. Taylor's speech before a steel crowd at Birmingham, Ala. Chairman Taylor, of the Steel Corporation, and Mr. Irwin, the president, referred to the corporation's proposed expenditure of $29,000,000 on plant expansion and improvement in that district. It is not so much the size of the sum to be spent that is significant as if is Mr. Taylor's observation that "the height of the storm seems to have passed and the economic ship has entered safer waters. In consequence, we do not hesitate to go on with our plans for rehabilitation and expansion, upon which we were at work when the depression came up on us."

Gold Effect.

Ordinarily an outflow of gold, narrowing the credit base, would tend to harden the money market and restrict credit in use. That won't necessarily follow from now on, for the money market is more completely in control of the Treasury and its agent, the Federal Reserve system, which can operate to create cheap money through the open market, with the discount rate, and with the power to lift excess reserves by lowering the reserve requirement. Under the agreement with Great Britain and France, which possibly will include Holland and Switzerland, foreign dollar balances here and foreign dollar investments can be turned into gold and repatriated. To such an extent as that is done our money market will lose resources, but so great is the excess of reserves now and so large the potential expansion, should the authorities so desire, that no early period of sharp contraction is to be anticipated.

The greatest threat to cheap money probably would be delivered by so considerable a rise in commercial and speculative borrowing of bank funds that, fearing an inflationary boom, the authorities might be willing to see rates tighten, even at the risk of bringing down prices of Government bonds and increasing the cost of financing the Federal deficit.

Woodring to Give Yorktown Speech

Secretary Woodring will make the principal address at the celebration of the 155th anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis at Yorktown, Va., October 19, the National Park Service announced yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

The celebration will be held under the auspices of the park service, the citizens of Yorktown and various patriotic bodies.

Secretary Woodring, appearing on the afternoon program, will be introduced by Gov. George C. Peery, who also will make an address at the morning program.

B. Floyd Flickinger, superintendent of the Colonial National Historical Park, embracing most of the Yorktown battlefield area, will represent the National Park Service. Others taking part on the program will be Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Arthur Rowbotham, Virginia State regent of the D. A. R.; Mrs. C. A. Swann Sinclair, president of the National Society of the Children of the American Revolution; and Tom Moore, president of the Virginia Sons of the American Revolution.

Clevenger Suit Asks $50,000 Of Hotel in N.C.

By the United Press.

Asheville, N. C., Oct. 15.—A suit asking $50,000 damages from the owners and operators of the Battery Park Hotel here for "gross negligence" in connection with the brutal slaying of Helen Clevenger, blonde 22-year-old New York University co-ed, last June 16, was filed in Buncombe County Superior Court late today.

The suit was filed by Maj. L. P. McLendon Greensboro, N. C., in the name of C. B. Clevenger, uncle and administrator of the dead girl's estate. Named as defendants were E. W. Grove, jr., and the Union Trust Co., of St. Louis, executors of the estate of the late E. W. Grove, builder and owner of the hotel; the Knott Hotel Co., operators of the Battery Park, and Pat H. Branch, its manager.

Charges Negligence.

In the suit C. B. Clevenger, the uncle who is a professor at North Carolina State College in Raleigh, maintained the hotel committed "gross negligence" in permitting pass keys to be distributed indiscriminately, in failing to guard the hallways properly and in leaving the back door of the hotel open.

Miss Clevenger was shot and beaten to death in her room at the hotel shortly after midnight on June 16. For five weeks, police and county officers worked unsuccessfully to solve the sensational murder. Shortly after two New York City detectives entered the case, Martin Moore, colored hallboy at the hotel, was arrested and confessed he went to Miss Clevenger's room, shot her and beat her to death with the butt of a pistol.

Moore later repudiated his confession, but was convicted in a five-day trial and sentenced to die October 2 in the North Carolina gas chamber at the State prison in Raleigh.

An appeal to the State Supreme Court for permission to request a new trial brought an automatic stay of execution. Moore's attorneys have until October 22 to file with the court their briefs in the new trial appeal. Following his conviction, Moore again confessed he killed the pretty blonde co-ed, who was taking a vacation trip through the North Carolina mountain country after completing her first year at New York University with honors.

Another uncle, W. L. Clevenger, also an instructor at North Carolina State College, accompanied Helen on her visit to Asheville. He was staying in another room of the hotel the night she was murdered, and at one stage of the subsequent investigation was held "for questioning."

Harold H. Levi, vice president and general manager of the Hecht Co., who died at his home last week, named his wife and their children as principal beneficiaries of his estate. Since no petition for probate of the will accompanied the filing of the testament, no evaluation of the estate was given.

Among the bequests provided for in the will were ones granting $500 each to the Community Chest, the Hebrew Home for the Aged, the Jewish Federated Charities, of Baltimore, and the Atlanta Orphans' Home, Atlanta, Ga.

The wife, Mrs. Viola M. Levi, is to have all the personal effects of the man who rose from a humble position in the store to an executive position. She, with the National Savings & Trust Co., are to hold the bulk of the estate in trust, with the net income payable to Mrs. Levi for life. Upon her death, the trust is to be terminated and proceeds equally divided among the children.

There was a qualifying provision, however, which stipulated that none of the children should receive their shares until they are 35 years old. Also, if Mrs. Levi is alive when any child reaches that age, she may, in her discretion, advance them from their share at least $35,000. The will was dated July 28, 1931.

The Black Automatic

By WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY

CHAPTER 11.

The Slave was out. A post and human help—that was out. He dared not even try to glide a few miles toward the Slave. That gray plane would swim up alongside, run another burst at point-blank range, either kill him and Harla outright or turn the stricken little Diomede into a holocaust of flames. He had to get out of the air, get down, get himself and Harla out of the ship, get shelter from that deadly gun—if he could.

With a glance at the lake below, he dived again, aiming at the rocky islet in the lake center. The islet was hardly larger than a garden plot, but it was solid ground, not quivering bog. Among its gray lichened bowlders he and Harla might find some sort of cover.

The laboring motor konked and died, but at the steep slant the Diomede was picking up speed, the controls were firming and tightening. In a strange silence, a silence that throbbed loudly after four hours of constant engine roar, the plane went swishing down toward the rocky islet.

She glanced back. Though she had recovered a little from the paralyzing shock of the attack, she was still breathless and bewildered.

"You threw them off; they're more than a mile away—over at the west side of this lake. But they're banking, swinging around and dropping . . . Now they're heading for us. Noel! Who are they? Why are they trying——?"

"Don't ask questions now! Look down ahead. See that island? We've got to whip ashore there. Got to get into that rock jumble. I'll plow into the shallows. In close. Be ready to jump out and break for those rocks. If we're slow about it, that machine gun will cut us down. Grab your rifle from the rack. Get our outfits ready. We've got to have them and your gun."

Harla pulled down her rifle, but the outfits had tumbled back behind the rear seat and were wedged tight; and in the careening plane she managed to free only Noel's blanket roll.

Fish-tailing to kill his speed, Noel dropped for the water, at a dangerous angle. With a splash and terrific impact the Diomede hit the surface a hundred yards from the islet, bounced up again, smacked the water a second time, bumped on into the shallows till the pontoons scraped the muck and dug in and grounded solidly—with a jolt that threw Noel and Harla against the instrument board.

Noel tried to fling open his cabin door, but it was jammed. Smashing at it with the butt of the rifle, he broke it open, leaped out upon the left float and helped Harla down.

He intended to spring back into the cabin and grab their outfits and that creel of food. Without food or any means of protection against the torturing insect hordes, their chances of keeping alive in this appalling muskeg country were next to nothing, even if they did find temporary refuge in the rocks yonder and were able to fight off these enemies. And he had to get those things now or he never would. That gray plane would land, taxi in to easy range, set the Diomede afire and destroy the little ship.

But he had no chance to get back into the cabin and gather up their outfits. The enemy plane, less than a thousand yards away, was hurtling straight at them.

"Come on! Hurry it!" he cried at Harla, who was waiting on his leadership. He reached inside the cabin and grabbed his blanket roll—the first thing to hand—and seized Harla's arm. "Those two big rocks there by the little juniper—we'll get down between them. If that gun catches us in the open, we're done for."

They jumped into the knee-deep water and splashed ashore, with Noel carrying the blanket roll and rifle. The muck slowed them down. As they raced across the slippery landwash, the gray plane thundered into range, and that ominous ratt-tatt-tt-tt-tt opened on them again.

Noel put himself between Harla and the gun, and held the blanket roll so that it shielded her head and shoulders.

Bullets hissed into the water, caromed off the lichened rocks and ricocheted out through the air. But the low trajectory and the speed of the plane destroyed the gunner's concentration, and the new belt he was using had no tracers to help him pick up his quarry.

They reached the juniper untouched. As they scrambled in between the two granite boulders the gray plane roared overhead, so low that they felt the blast of its slip stream.

* * * * * * *

It seemed to Harla that the long, dreadful day would never end. Her wrist watch said 10 o'clock at night, but a rim of the sun still showed above the northwest horizon and twilight had just started to settle over the marshy lake.

Beside her, in the little niche where they had been besieged for 15 hours, Noel was lying asleep, half curled around the tiny smudge which they had built to fight off the mosquitoes and swarming brules.

How anybody could calmly lie down and go to sleep in a plight like theirs—hungry, wet, muddy; no food, no boat, no outfit; imprisoned on this islet; stranded in this wilderness of bog and lonely waters—it was more than she could understand. But he had done it. "Guess I'd better catch a bit of rest, Harla, so I'll be feeling fit for our breakaway tonight," he had said to her, five hours ago. "Call me at 10, won't you?" As coolly and casually as that!

She wished that she had a little of his sang froid. She was tired, thirsty, hungry; the smoke stung her eyes; her face and hands were badly bitten despite the smudge; and her spirits were at a low ebb generally.

In the shallows 50 yards away lay all that was left of the brave little Diomede—its gaunt fire-blackened skeleton of steel and lattice iron. On the open water 700 yards beyond the big gray plane rode triumphantly at anchor, with its machine gun trained on the islet, and two canvas canoes bobbing alongside the floats.

So far as she could see, that plane did not carry a single identification letter or symbol. Gray and mysterious, it seemed like an anonymous gray death, ranging these wild lands. And those six men in it, wearing heavy leather clothes and masked with mosquito veils, seemed more likely apparitions of evil than men of flesh and blood.

Those six, yonder, plainly had no intention of closing in and making a head-on attack. Possibly they had witnessed that shooting contest at McMurray and knew she could do things with a rifle. They were calmly waiting, confident that another day of hunger, thirst and insect torture would drive their two victims to the open, where that big-barreled Vickers would have its chance at them.

Even if they did get away from these men, the Slave River was 40 miles distant. Forty muskeg miles She knew muskeg and she knew "flies." That river was almost as forlorn a goal as the mountains of the moon.

Stranded, hopelessly stranded, 800 miles from Manitou, just when she needed so desperately to be there and help Jimmy—or find him—or find out what had happened to him . . . Why hadn't he answered the urgent wireless she sent him from Ottawa? Or her second wireless from Edmonton? Or her third from McMurray? Jimmy had never got those messages. Why hadn't he? Where was he? Those enemies whom he had mentioned in his last letter—had they finally trapped him?

Net Tightening About Suspect In Loring Death

The investigation of the murder of Corinna Loring, 27-year-old Mount Rainier, Md., bride-to-be has now entered what police believe will be the final stage.

Whereas the investigators in the early stages wasted much time and effort running down friutless clews, they are now seeking to weave a net of evidence around a particular individual.

This individual, it became known Wednesday, is definitely suspected of the crime by Lieut. Joseph H. Itzel, Baltimore detective assigned to the case, and by those assisting him.

Itzel appeared before the Prince Georges County grand jury, named the suspect and cited his evidence in detail. However, he urged the 23 grand jurors not to return an indictment at this time.

While there might be enough evidence to justify an indictment, Itzel later told reporters, there was not enough to make a conviction likely if the case went to trial. Henceforth, all efforts will be bent on gathering the evidence still felt to be necessary.

The Prince Georges County grand jury yesterday returned 38 indictments, but none of them had to do with the Loring case.

It is expected that the grand jury will take Lieut. Itzel's advice and forego an indictment in the Loring murder at this session. However, this is by no means certain.

The jury has the power to summon witnesses, prolong its investigation and return an indictment if it so chooses.

Eugene Plumer, Mount Rainier chief of police, appeared before the grand jury yesterday, but he later explained that he testified about a minor case.

Delaware Schools Ban Tugwell Book

Wilmington, Del., Oct. 15 (AP).—Henry Ridgely, president of the State Board of Education, made known today that the board had stricken from its approved list of text books "Our Economic Society and Its Problems," written by Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, in collaboration with Howard G. Hill, of the University of Chicago.

"We have stricken it from the list, not because of any political reasons, nor opposition to the New Deal," said Ridgely.

"This was supposed to be an economics book, but it really is a book peculiar to the New Deal. It deals with one theory of economics—and only one theory of a certain man."

The book was placed on the 1934 approved list for use of high school students in studying economics. Parents of a number of students objected to the board against its use and the board members unanimously decided to remove it from the lists.
